RECOVERY DRIVE CHIEFS SEEK END TO SPECULATION

See It as Drag on Price Boosting.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 27.—[Special.]—While members of the brain trust watched the ticker today for evidence that the Roosevelt money manipulation policy is boosting prices, it became known that the administration is steadily driving toward the objective of the suppression of speculation in stocks and commodities.

Blaming speculation for circumventing the Roosevelt measures of recovery from the depression, the administration has, in effect, declared war on the stock speculators of Wall Street and the speculators of the Chicago Board of Trade and other commodity markets.

It appears that consideration is being given to a definite program of government regulation of the exchanges designed to eliminate all speculation except hedging operations and that it is the purpose to seek legislation to this end at the approaching session of congress.

Gold Up Another 22 Cents.

The President's three man money control board again boosted the price of gold today, setting a figure of $31.16 an ounce, which is an advance of 22 cents over the price fixed yesterday and 66 cents above the London quotation.

The markets, however, failed to respond to the degree expected by the brain trust members who conceived this latest Roosevelt scheme for raising commodity prices and restoring purchasing power.

The President watched developments in silence, declining at the press-conference this afternoon to comment on the price movements or to dispel the confusion of the public mind regarding the monetary policy he outlined in the barest generalities in his radio address last Sunday night.

Mr. Roosevelt came into office proclaiming the flight of the money changers "from their high seats in the temple of our civilization" and declaring for the restoration of the temple "to the ancient truths" by applying "social values more noble than mere monetary profit."

That he has not swerved from that aim is demonstrated by his remark in his radio speech last Sunday that the "edifice of recovery" will no longer be a temple of money changers or of beggars, but a temple "dedicated to and maintained for a greater social justice."

Bankers, Brokers, Speculators.

In the category of money changers the President apparently placed not only bankers but brokers and speculators. He pushed legislation through congress stringently regulating banking and providing elaborate publicity for security issues. But in the extraordinary session of congress he did not get around to the regulation of the stock and grain exchanges.

In the meantime many developments have fanned the flames of warfare between the administration and Wall Street. The President endeavored to boost commodity prices by numerous devices. He was gratified when they did go up, but he was chagrined when they subsequently fell. While others were holding the brain trust responsible for futile schemes to influence prices, the President sought the reason for failure elsewhere and thought he found it in the operations of speculators.

Then along late in the summer business began to slump after an initial revival which the administration had ascribed to the NRA. There were signs of lack of confidence of the business world in the Roosevelt recovery program. At once the cry went up from administration precincts that Wall Street was in revolt against the recovery program because under the NRA industry would be unable to make the enormous profits of other days.

Keep After Wall Street.

In vain did business men explain that their caution was due to the inability to foresee a chance of making any profit in the immediate future at least. Wall Street continued to be the goat and on every side one heard it whispered that the administration was determined to take Wall Street "to a cleaning" as soon as congress reassembles.

That the President has been turning over in his mind ways and means of curbing speculation is evidenced by many developments of late culminating in the NRA.

11 Are Killed as Arabs Riot Against Jews

JAFFA, Palestine, Oct. 27.—(AP)—

Eleven men were killed today in a riot of Arabs protesting against Jewish immigration, according to an official statement. A reliable witness estimated the dead at 20.

One of the men killed was a policeman, the first to be killed in the riot.

What he found wasn't neighbors in distress, but three bandits holding up two drivers for the beer agency. The bandits, in a manner, were in distress, for the dog was snapping at them. When they saw Walski they covered him with guns, but the policeman didn't hesitate. He drew his gun, dropped one of the bandits with bullets in the foot and knee and routed the two others. The captured robber identified himself as Edward Fern.

had opened fire on them. The police used their firearms, it was stated, when the mob refused to disperse. The spite several baton charges, and persisted in re-forming.

Riot in Jerusalem: 1 Slain.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Police fired on an excited crowd attacking their headquarters tonight, killing one person and wounding several others. The police first charged, using clubs, but failed to disperse the mob and began shooting. One policeman was killed.

The riot resulted from a previously announced intention of Arabs to hold a demonstration against the present increase of Jewish immigrants into Palestine. Sir Arthur Grenfell Wauchope, Palestine high commissioner, issued an order banning the demonstration.

The government buildings here were surrounded with barbed wire entanglements and the police were issued steel helmets and steel shields.

Arab Merchants Close Shops.

This morning the Arab merchants closed their shops in a general strike. After midday prayers in the mosque they emerged on the streets armed with guns, sticks, and stones and endeavored to force their way through waiting police lines to hold their demonstration.

BARKING DOG GIVES FRIENDLY POLICEMAN SOME TENSE MOMENTS

As South Park Policeman Martin Walski left his home at 4135 South Artesian avenue to go to work last night he heard a dog barking in the rear of the Remlinger Beer Distributing plant, 4125 South Artesian avenue.

He looked down the alley and saw the dog apparently snapping at several men. Thinking the men were neighbors and the dog overplayful, Policeman Walski called out: "Can I be of any help?" One of the men yelled back: "You bet you can. Hurry over."

Policeman Walski hurried over. What he found wasn't neighbors in distress, but three bandits holding up two drivers for the beer agency. The bandits, in a manner, were in distress, for the dog was snapping at them. When they saw Walski they covered him with guns, but the policeman didn't hesitate. The piece is 9 1/2 feet high, 4 feet wide, and is finely finished. Clausen overheard a barber offering the desk to a customer if he would take it away. The customer declined and Clausen eagerly accepted the offer.

Farm Strike Picket Slain in Wisconsin

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 27.—[Special.]—Gunder Felland, 60 year old farm strike picket, tonight was shot and killed by an unidentified man who, without warning, fired a revolver at a group of farmers who had halted his truck.

The victim, with thirty other pickets, was engaged in halting trucks bearing farm produce to Madison markets in connection with the strike order of the National Farm Holiday association to force higher prices.

The killing followed a series of violence in the state throughout the day, in which at least five persons were injured, one seriously, by pickets.

Three Brothers Arrested.

Three brothers were arrested by Sheriff Fred T. Finn shortly before midnight as suspects in the shooting. Although they admitted they occupied a sedan and a truck which the farmers halted, none of them would admit firing the shot that killed Felland.

The brothers are Frank, Harvey, and Jack McCorsion. Frank, the oldest of the three, is a resident of Madison. The other two live with their parents in Marshfield, Wis.

Conflicting stories concerning the shooting were told by pickets, according to Sheriff Finn. Some said the driver of the sedan shot Felland, while others contended the driver of the truck fired the fatal shot.

Wife on Truck.

Finn said Frank McCorsion was the driver of the sedan and that his brother Jack rode with him. Harvey drove the truck and was accompanied in the cab by his wife, the sheriff said.

Felland operated a large farm in the town of Burke, Dane county, and was a former member of the county board.

The shooting occurred at the intersection of the Sun Prairie and Portage roads, less than five miles from Madison. Pickets said they were unarmed when they surrounded the sedan and truck which followed it.

Two men leaped from the sedan, one of them flourishing a revolver. An armed man and a woman stepped from the truck cab and the man, swearing, immediately fired into the group of pickets.

It was evident that the long delays to which the hearing had been subjected had been beneficial to the defendants.

INSULL SPRINGS COUP IN GREEK COURT HEARING

Puts In Evidence at

May Free Brother

Judge at Toronto, Ont., hints he may deny appeal of state of Illinois for extradition of Martin Insull on charge of embezzlement and larceny. Judge says he doubts whether Insull transaction could be termed "theft." (Story on page 8.)

BY DAVID DARRAH.
Chicago Tribune Press Service.

(Copyright, 1933, by The Chicago Tribune.)

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 27.—Samuel Insull, former Chicago utilities emperor, who is sought by the American government on charges of fraudulent bankruptcy in connection with the collapse of his companies, will learn next Tuesday at 5 p. m. whether he will continue his sojourn in Greece as a fugitive from justice or go back to Chicago to stand trial.

The Greek Court of Appeals finished hearing arguments in the case at 9 o'clock tonight and announced that it would adjourn for three days before making known its decision.

Insull appeared happy and smiling this evening as the court broke up as if he felt sure of victory.

Insull Gets Over New Material.

Today's session was supposed to be devoted to rebuttal arguments, but Insull's lawyers, contrary to usual court practice in America, introduced new documents and material; and the court said it would accept these and possibly consider them.

"Isn't it unusual to accept new material at rebuttal?" Prosecutor Anthony Reganokos was asked after the hearing.

"No, not here in Greece where we are very lenient," he replied. "We accept it, but do not always use it."

The court accepted a deposition from Alexis Arsenault, a bookkeeper for Insull which his lawyers had just received from Chicago. This document is supposed to refute the documents submitted by the United States government, which were made up by certified accountants.

Replaces Former Deposition.

(Floyd E. Thompson, former chief justice of the Illinois Supreme court and now Insull's Chicago attorney, said last night the new deposition was made by a bookkeeper for the Corporation Securities company. The deposition is a virtual duplicate of that offered last week by William E. Irwin, auditor of the company and one of the ten men indicted with Insull by the federal government. In substance the deposition declares that the Corporation Securities company was liquid when dividends were paid on its optional stock in 1930. The substitution of the bookkeeper's deposition for that of Irwin's followed the suggestion of Insull's Athens lawyers, who said such a document should better come from someone not under indictment.)

Prosecutor Reganokos was supposed to be the central figure in today's hearing with his rebuttal speech in which it was supposed he had packed dynamite. Instead, however, Reganokos' speech appeared most ineffectual and unconvincing compared to the fiery orations of Insull's three lawyers, who again got an opportunity today to make remarks.

Lawyers Heckle Prosecutors.

Reganokos spoke for only two hours and when he finished smiles began to come back to Insull's face. During a short recess Insull walked around the court and chatted with friends.

Reganokos was heckled frequently by Insull's lawyers. He fumbled much with papers and sometimes he had to stop for a period, interrupting his speech until he found a document.

The crowd which jammed the stifling little courtroom sat up with interest when the prosecutor had finished and Insull's lawyers got the floor. While the prosecutor finished in two hours, making a total time in present hearing of three hours, each of Insull's three lawyers spoke again today for two hours, making the total time they addressed the court around 14 or 15 hours.

It was evident that the long delays to which the hearing had been subjected had been beneficial to the defendants.

Louis Cowen Shot in Auto; Wound Guard

Gangster enemies late yesterday afternoon put an end to the career of Louis Cowen, wealthy publisher of the Cicero Tribune, slot machine czar of the western suburbs, and one time keeper of the ball bond cash of the Capone gang.

Cowen was seated behind the wheel of his Lincoln automobile in front of the Clifford theater at 5935 Roosevelt road, Cicero, when a small coupe or roadster, headed east, was slowly driven by. From the car came one discharge of a shotgun, then two more.

No Chance to Use Pistol.

The first blast struck Cowen in the face and head. He had no opportunity to use a pistol which lay beside him on the car seat. The second discharge tore a hole in the car window beside the publisher. The third, apparently directed at Joseph Corngold, alias Piffie, bodyguard of the publisher, who was preparing to enter the car, struck the windshield.

After the shooting the killers' car was driven rapidly away to the east. Corngold then drove in Cowen's car to the Frances Willard hospital, where physicians pronounced the publisher dead. Corngold had slight wounds in the left leg.

Question Corngold Gently.

No guess as to the motive of the killers was made, publicly at least, by the Cicero police. They took Corngold to the station and questioned him, but so gently that he gave no information that wasn't already known. The police did not even discover he had been wounded; that fact was disclosed only after Investigator Francis Donahue of the coroner's office arrived and took up the investigation.

But those who had known Cowen recalled that an attempt to kidnap him was made about four months ago. They surmised that he might have been slain in a war over gambling privileges, for refusing to lend money from his ample funds to aid Capone gangsters in trouble, or perhaps because he was trying to find the would-be kidnapers and have them punished.

Discard Mail Robbery Theory.

One theory they discarded—that Cowen may have been involved in the mail loot disposal case that brought the deaths of Gus Winkler, north side gang chief, and Edgar J. Lehenberg, café owner. Cowen, they held, was too smart, if not too honest, to play with stolen bonds, they said. This view was corroborated by postal inspectors working on the mail robbery investigation. Cowen, they said, was not involved in any way.

Cowen knew Winkler. He knew Edward Bergl, the Cicero garage owner who is believed to have sheltered the gangsters who robbed two Federal Reserve bank messengers in the loop on Sept. 22 and killed a policeman while escaping. But Cowen's relations with these men were not close and his friends explained that he was too busy with his own affairs to mix in with those of others.

His gambling affiliations alone were

Draws a Wide Program.

The President, not only sanctioning but actively abetting the government boycott on the Ford Motor company, went still farther today and announced as a general policy of the administration that no company anywhere, which does not sport a Blue Eagle, will receive any patronage from the government.

Even if the company complies entirely with an NRA code, the President declared, it will not get government trade unless it has actively supported the NRA by signing a certificate of compliance under the Blue Eagle.

Furthermore, the President announced, no retailer who has mounted the Blue Eagle in his shop can sell the government articles unless they have been made in NRA factories.

Mr. Roosevelt conceded that his program depended upon a ruling by Controller General McCall that the government can legally throw out bids which are lowest of those submitted just because of the low bidder's non-support of NRA.

May Move for Prosecution.

Gen. Johnson earlier had announced to newspaper men that if he obtained evidence that the Ford company was violating the automobile code he would "turn the case over to the attorney general for prosecution."

The blistering NRA boss tossed in a bit of an anticlimax when he was asked about the Lincoln limousine he rides around in.

"We're going to trade it in for a Cadillac," he declared. "If Ford owns the Lincoln Motor company."

"Will the President and the members of the cabinet trade in their Lincoln cars also?" Johnson was asked.

"I don't know. You must speak to them."

Says He Doesn't Know.

Then Johnson, asked if the Lincoln company had not signed a compliance entitling it to the Blue Eagle, confessed that he did not know whether they had or not.

"I saw it in the paper," he said, "but I do not know whether they did or how they did. That is all I know."

Having already announced he was trading in his government owned Lincoln, Gen. Johnson then, in response to further questions, acknowledged rather grudgingly that if the Lincoln company had signed the code compliance certificate "I would have to accept it so far as that company is concerned."

Policy of NRA Attacked.

In response to all this, Mr. Ford, in Detroit, issued a statement in the name of the Ford Motor company attacking the policy of the NRA, labeling Gen. Johnson a dictator who wanted to be supreme court as well as industrial czar, declaring the Ford company maintained conditions that High points of the Ford company's attack on Gen. Johnson and the NRA are:

"There is no money in government bids unless some form of favoritism is practiced, such as is now possible under the NRA."

"Johnson now proposes to charge the American taxpayer a higher price in order to give government business to a concern that pays lower wages than the Ford Motor company does."

"To cover his action Johnson makes the false charge that the Ford Motor company has not complied with the law. Johnson's daily expression of opinion is not law."

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
Chicago Tribune Press Service.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 27.—[Special.]—The battle of the NRA versus Henry Ford reached the heights today as President Roosevelt and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson joined in lambasting Ford once more, and Mr. Ford rejoined with a blast against Johnson and the NRA.

Mr. Ford, in a statement issued in Detroit, lambasted Mr. Johnson. Said his business was operated on as liberal policies as demanded by the NRA. He said the Ford plants were operated to the benefit of the workers; there was no need for a union as the company had dealt with the employees successfully for years. He asserted that the NRA brought the peril of government interference in private business.

Draws a Wide Program.

The President, not only sanctioning but actively abetting the government boycott on the Ford Motor company, went still farther today and announced as a general policy of the administration that no company anywhere, which does not sport a Blue Eagle, will receive any patronage from the government.

Even if the company complies entirely with an NRA code, the President declared, it will not get government trade unless it has actively supported the NRA by signing a certificate of compliance under the Blue Eagle.

Furthermore, the President announced, no retailer who has mounted the Blue Eagle in his shop can sell the government articles unless they have been made in NRA factories.

Mr. Roosevelt conceded

the NRA would not dare to stand for, and challenging the NRA and Johnson to do their worst by him.

The President's new dictum that the government boycott applies even to employers who comply with an NRA code, unless they have signed for the Blue Eagle, is in conflict with his executive order of Aug. 10, which provided that all government contracts should require that "the contractor shall comply with all provisions of the applicable approved code of fair competition for the trade or industry or subdivision thereof concerned, or, if there be no approved code of fair competition for that industry, then with the provisions of the President's employment agreement."

Truck Bids Make Issue

The case has come to issue in the case of bids for motor trucks for the civilian conservation corps. The Ford company was lowest bidder, but Robert Fehner, director of the corps, announced that in furtherance of the NRA position he would throw out the Ford bid. The Ford company, in its statement at Detroit, asserted the Ford dealer's bid was $200,000 below the bid of the next lowest company.

The Johnson threat to open prosecution against Mr. Ford was hinged upon a demand made by the national automobile chamber of commerce, official code authority to administer the automobile code, for all automobile manufacturers to submit figures showing rate of production, wages paid, hours worked, and similar statistics.

Johnson Is Questioned

Gen. Johnson said he understood the chamber had set a deadline of Nov. 7 for the figures to be submitted, and the following colloquy ensued between reporters and the NRA administrator:

Q—What are you going to do with Ford if he does not send this information? Will that be a violation of the code? A—Absolutely. As soon as I have a clear cut violation of the code I will act under the code. I will turn the case over to the attorney general's office.

Q—Do you consider Ford eligible to bid on government contracts at the present time inasmuch as to date the fact is he has complied with the code? A—No, I do not think he is eligible because he has publicly stated that he was not in sympathy with the code and he would never put into effect anything that looked toward collective bargaining. At least, he told me he would never put into effect anything that looked like collective bargaining.

"Cannot Hide," He Says

Q—General, as we understand it, the person who is making the bid on these C. C. C. automobiles is an independent dealer who purchases cars from any one. In that case, can the government buy from a man who can furnish to the code who buys from a manufacturer who does not? A—I have taken the position that a manufacturer cannot hide behind a $10,000 company.

Q—The national labor board is of the opinion that the Ford company is going in for collective bargaining. A—Well, I am not familiar with the developments.

Gen. Johnson stated that Edsel Ford, son of Henry Ford, had informed him the Ford company would never consent to collective bargaining.

Q—Would you care to enlarge on the penalties that will be imposed on Ford if he had not sent in the information requested by the code authority on Nov. 7? A—There are several penalties, but you will have to ask the court when the case comes up. There are fines or an injunctive process.

Jail Query Unanswered

Q—Is there a possibility of a jail sentence? Gen. Johnson declined to answer the last question.

Gen. Johnson later issued a formal statement, part of which stated as follows:

"Mr. Edsel Ford told me that the Ford Motor company would submit to no code that required collective bargaining. I have never said that I have concrete evidence of direct violations of the automobile code by that com-

New President of Chase Bank Disavows Wiggin Policies as to Speculation in Stock

Washington, D. C., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Market trading policies of Albert H. Wiggin, for years at the helm of the 2 billion dollar Chase National bank, were repudiated today before the senate banking committee by Winthrop W. Aldrich, his recent successor as its head.

Aldrich surprised the committee and speculators, along with Chase officials seated about him, by a brisk and voluntary declaration that the bank's present management is "absolutely opposed" to affiliates trading in the bank's stock in the market.

His statement was made just after investigators had presented evidence that Wiggin's personal companies had profited upward of 10 million dollars through dealing in the bank's stock, while bank affiliates and subsidiaries were engaging in various stock pool operations.

Stock Operations Traced

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, had just traced widespread and interwoven stock operations of the Chase Securities corporation and its subsidiary, Metropolitan Securities corporation, and Wiggin's personal companies, the Sherman, the Murlyn, and the Clington.

Wiggin, who ascended to leadership of the bank in 1911 and relinquished his place last January, looked on calmly while the younger Aldrich walked to the head of the committee table and said:

"In order that there shall be no misunderstanding on the part of the present stockholders of the bank as to what the attitude of the present management of the bank is with regard to participation by the affiliates of the bank in trading accounts in bank stocks, I would like to state that it is absolutely opposed to such transactions.

"As a matter of fact today the Metropolitan corporation does not deal in Chase stock in any way whatever, and as long as I have anything to do with the management of the bank in Chase stock will not be an artificial one."

Modifies His Statement

Explaining a moment later that the last part of his statement might seem too strong, Aldrich modified it to say that the "market in Chase stock shall not be affected by the operation of trading accounts by the affiliates of the bank."

Aldrich, brother-in-law of John D. Rockefeller Jr., the largest single holder of Chase bank stock, brought about the divestment of the bank and its securities affiliate last spring as one of his first acts on assuming to the leadership.

Pecora brought out that while Wiggin's personal corporations showed a profit of more than 10 million dollars in the bank stock, the Chase Securities corporation's operations yielded around $150,000. Wiggin explained there was a difference in the way they operated.

Explains Difference in Profits

Wiggin did not challenge Pecora's statement that the banker's personal company realized a fortune.

"To explain the difference in profits, Wiggin said his personal corporations had held the stock in which they traded for much longer periods than had the Chase Securities and affiliates, observing the bank affiliates "went in and out" of the market.

Profits to the personal companies were piled up in the five year period, 1924-1929, Pecora said, as follows: Sherman corporation, $5,594,333; Murlyn corporation, $388,161; Clington Company, Inc., $4,446,000.

Aldrich told newspaper men after the hearing recessed until Tuesday, at which time Pecora expects to go further into the activities of Wiggin's personal corporations, that he didn't know "anything about half of that."

"Then it was as much a surprise to you as to us," a reporter asked.

"It certainly was," the banker replied.

Dealings in the bank stock by the securities affiliates aggregated $60 million dollars, with purchases totaling $43,772,795, Pecora said. Sales amounted to $429,949,210 and hundreds of thousands of shares were involved.

Pecora added that in 1931, while the Metropolitan, a Chase Securities subsidiary, lost $2,336,011, the Sherman corporation made $4,138,000.

Wiggin testified that in 1929 the Sherman corporation was short on 60,000 shares of the bank's stock, while his family holdings, aggregating 176,924 shares, were long on the market.

REGIONAL LABOR BOARD TO HOLD FIRST MEETING

Organization Plans to Be Made Monday.

The new regional labor board, recently set up here as a part of the government's recovery program to arbitrate labor disputes in this territory, will hold its first meeting on Monday.

President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago, chairman of the board, issued a call yesterday to the ten members to assemble at the United States courthouse at 2 p. m. Monday to take up preliminary organization matters.

It was disclosed by Dr. John A. Lapp, a representative of the national labor board, who is supervising the organization of the Chicago board and also acting as temporary secretary, that three labor controversies are already awaiting action by the body.

They are: a dispute between workers and employers of the Greyhound Bus Lines and the A. Both dress manufacturing company here, and the Kappa Clothing company in Jacksonville, Ill.

To Ease Labor Problems

"The projection of the national labor board into this area, as well as the establishment of 15 other such boards throughout the country, will greatly facilitate the handling of the multitude of labor problems," said Dr. Lapp.

"While we will act on differences resulting under the NRA, we hope the code authorities will be able to settle disputes in the industries where code arbitration bodies have been established."

"Our first efforts will be at mediation. Representatives of the board will act as conciliators and try to settle the controversy without letting it go further. If they fail, however, we will then hold hearings at which both factions in the dispute will be fully represented."

"In the event of failure there, the board will render a decision which, if not accepted, may be appealed to the national labor board in Washington."

Appointed as Compliance Director, Frederic L. Roberts, manager of the Chicago office of the United States department of commerce, has been appointed by Washington NRA officials as district compliance director for Illinois and Wisconsin. His duties will be to try to settle problems, other than pure labor disputes, arising under the various codes in industries in which permanent code arbitration bodies have not been established.

"Complaints of code violations will be made to him in writing at his headquarters at 201 North Wells street. His investigations will be carried on by correspondence or by calling into his office for personal interviews the persons complained against."

Maj. R. B. Paddock, deputy NRA administrator, arrived from Washington yesterday to confer here with leaders in the industries over which he has supervision, which include jewelry, watches and clocks and undertaking businesses and relating lines.

RECOVERY DRIVE CHIEFS SEEK END TO SPECULATION

Call It Drag on Price Boosting Plans.

In his summons of Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock exchange, what took place in his interview with the President has not been revealed, but it was only too apparent that Mr. Whitney left the presence in a very sober frame of mind.

Mr. Whitney and the officials of other exchanges have defended speculation on the ground that only in a free market can violent fluctuations of prices be prevented.

Administration Unconvinced

But administration officials remain unconvinced. They contend that the movement of prices on the Chicago Board of Trade and other grain exchanges, for example, disclose an entirely different state of affairs. Last summer wheat jumped to 80, then 90 cents, and finally to $1.25 a bushel, at which point the "longs" began taking to cover, and the price slid back to 80 cents.

Then when the "longs" had been pretty well shaken out of the market the speculators pushed the price back up to $1, but eventually became frightened and let go with the result that the price dropped to 80 cents.

Thereupon the administration began an investigation which has been in progress for two or three months. The grain futures administration recently reported that speculators on the Chicago Board of Trade now control upward of 135 million bushels of wheat on which they have no intention of accepting delivery. According to the administration viewpoint this is pure gambling.

JESSE LIVERMORE SUE BY WOMAN; ASKS $250,000

New York, Oct. 27.—(AP)—A $250,000 breach of promise suit was begun in Supreme court today against Jesse L. Livermore, Wall street operator, by Miss Naida Krassnova, who was not identified.

Livermore was married for the third time last March in Geneva, Ill., to Miss Harriet Metz Noble, an opera singer of Omaha, Neb. The broker said he intends to file a general denial to the charges brought by the plaintiff and his counsel filed a motion for a bill of particulars today.

FIRST CITY SIGNS FOR POWER FROM MUSCLE SHOALS

Tupelo, Miss., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Tupelo today became the first city in America to obtain a Tennessee valley authority contract for direct Muscle Shoals power.

The TVA commissioners and the city authorities entered into a contract to run for 20 years with current to be sold at a rate of seven mills or less per kilowatt hour to the city.

The contract permits Tupelo, as a municipality, to sell and supply current to surrounding rural communities or nearby towns.

Local domestic rates will be cut a minimum of 87.2-3 per cent from the starting rate. Commercial rates will receive a 50 per cent cut. Industrial rates will average about 7 mills per kilowatt hour.

The contract provides that the authority will furnish a transmission line and will supply current in needed quantities beginning Feb. 1, 1934, the date of the expiration of the city's contract to buy power from the Mississippi Power company.

2 EUROPEAN AIR EXPERTS HURT IN CRASH; ONE DEAD

Freak Auto Turns Over with Graf Passengers.

The driver of a new type of three wheeled automobile was fatally injured and two passengers, internationally known as aviation experts, were seriously hurt yesterday morning when the car skidded on the outer drive about 14th street and turned over four times.

The driver, who died of a fractured skull in Mercy hospital during the afternoon, was Francis T. Turner, 36 years old, an aviation mechanic, whose home was in Birmingham, Ala.

One of the injured victims is Col. William Francis Forbes-Sempill, who bears the English title of the Master of Sempill. He is 40 years old, the eldest son and heir to Lord Sempill of Scotland, and has residences both at London and Aberdeenshire.

The other injured man is Charles Dollfus of Paris, France, 40 years old. He is a representative of the French air ministry.

Col. Forbes-Sempill received two small skull fractures and Dollfus was cut and bruised and may have received internal injuries. They were reported in a serious condition in Mercy hospital last night.

Passengers on Zeppelin.
Dollfus and Col. Forbes-Sempill were passengers aboard the Graf Zeppelin on the dirigible's recent trip from Germany to Chicago by way of South America.

Turner was driving the two men to the municipal airport, where they had made plane reservations to Akron O., where they intended to board the Graf Zeppelin for the return trip to Europe.

The accident occurred at 8:15 a. m. The automobile driven by Turner was 13 feet in length and oval shaped. The body had been modeled on aerodynamic principles to decrease wind resistance. It ran upon three wheels, two in front and one in the rear, and was powered by a Ford V-8 motor in the rear. The steering wheel controlled the rear wheel. The car was manufactured as an experiment by the Gulf Refining Company.

Crashes into Another Car.
According to Policemen Edward Bonfield and T. A. Mora, who witnessed the accident, the machine was not proceeding at a speed of more than 40 miles an hour. As it ran south in the outer drive it began skidding at a point opposite the south end of Soldiers' field. It turned sideways, according to the policemen, and then toppled over, making four complete revolutions before it crashed into an automobile driven by Meyer Roth, 4905 North Whipple street. Roth was not hurt.

The injured men were rushed to the hospital in the automobile of a J. H. Hirsch, who was passing at the time. Representatives of the English and French consular offices visited the hospital and left word that no one was to see either Dollfus or Forbes-Sempill.

Record as War Aviator.
Col. Forbes-Sempill had a distinguished military record during the war as an aviator. He was chairman of the Royal Aeronautical society in 1926 and president from 1928 through 1930. In 1921 he helped organize the Imperial Japanese air force. He was aboard the Zeppelin as an official observer for England.

Dollfus is an attaché of the French air ministry and a member of the family which owns and operates the Dollfus-Mieg thread manufacturing firm of Mulhouse, France. He was a passenger on the Zeppelin because of an interest in the possible development of dirigible passenger traffic across the Atlantic.

Turner's wife flew from Birmingham when she heard of the accident, but arrived last night several hours after her husband's death. Turner was an aviation mechanic who was employed by the Gulf Refining company to drive the car for advertising purposes.

Teacher Is Killed.
Mrs. Celia Gagan, 49 years old, 1936 North Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park, a gymnasium teacher at the Von Steuben High school, was fatally injured yesterday when her automobile crashed into a bus at Fullerton and Warrington streets as she was hurrying to her classes. She died half an hour later in the Shriners' hospital, 2211 North Oak Park avenue. She had been a teacher in the Chicago school system for nearly ten years. She was the mother of three children and was also survived by her husband, Raymond J. Gagan.

These deaths and two others yesterday raised the 1933 auto toll to 873. The other victims:
John Saychick, 37 years old, 2615 East Seventy-third street, a watchman. Died at Southtown hospital after being struck early yesterday at Western avenue and Forty-eighth street by a hit and run driver.
Jerome Eustice, 54 years old, 4132 North Kedvale avenue, a janitor. Died in the county hospital after being struck by a hit and run driver at Irving Park boulevard and Kedvale avenue.

Two Killed by Train.
Two middle aged men, clad in working clothes, were killed last evening when the light truck in which they were riding was demolished by a Pennsylvania railroad passenger train at Leroy, Ind., southeast of Crown Point. Efforts to identify the victims were hampered by the fact that there were no identifying papers in their clothing and that the license on their truck had been stolen a month ago from the Gary automobile for which it was issued.

Richard Bond Curry, 45 years old, of 743 Ridgewood drive, Highland Park, a wealthy painting contractor, was critically injured last night in a collision between his automobile and a car driven by John Ginter, 19 years old, son of E. J. Ginter of Summit Lane, Bannockburn. The accident occurred at Sheridan place and St. John avenue, Highland Park. Curry was taken to the Highland Park hospital, suffering from a skull fracture.

Anton Bormida, 49 years old, of Waukegan, died yesterday in Victory Memorial hospital of injuries suffered Thursday night when he and a friend, Samuel Ambrogio, 44, also of Waukegan, were struck by an automobile at Genesee and Liberty streets.

JOHNSON SPANKS RESERVE BOARD FOR BLUE REPORT

Demands Denial of Industry Decline.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
Washington, D. C., Oct. 27.—(Special.)—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, czar of industry, today tried to spank the federal reserve board because its business statistics don't give a rosy picture and because the board reported industries operating under codes to be suffering a "marked" decline.

Although Johnson, in a protracted telephone conversation, extracted from E. A. Goldenweiser, head of the board's research division, an admission that the statement was "inadvertent," the federal reserve board itself stuck by its guns and its statistics.

Issues Denial Himself.
To counteract the board Johnson issued a statement in which he declared that every report he had received since last August, except those from the steel industry, had shown a "definite upward trend."

The reserve board yesterday reported declines either in September or early October in lumber, steel, automobile, cement, coal, petroleum, silk, cotton, and wool productions, in employment and in department store sales.

Today, however, the board set the volatile Gen. Johnson boiling by issuing a statement containing the following sentence: "The decline in industrial activity during the past two months has come, in large measure, in the industries in which expansion previously had been rapid. It has also been marked in industries in which processing taxes or codes have become effective recently."

Defends His Codes.
Seething at the inference that his codes were shocking industry, Johnson rebuffed the board by phone. He sought to get a denial issued by the White House, and finally blasted forth with his own declaration that everything was rosy.

After refusing Johnson's demands for a retraction the office of Gov. Black of the federal reserve board declared tonight that the sentence, read in its context, was correct. The board

Obstacle to Marriage

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 27.—(P)—The diamond engagement ring that Maureen O'Sullivan, Irish actress, is wearing, was given to her, she said tonight, by John Farrow, Australian writer of movie scenarios.

Miss O'Sullivan said they were engaged, but there was an obstacle to their marriage in the Roman Catholic church because Farrow was divorced several years ago by a San Francisco girl.

A special dispensation has been asked, Miss O'Sullivan said.

Wallace "Explains."
Nor was Gen. Johnson the only new deal administrator to evidence hard feelings at the reserve board's "inadvertency." Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace tonight issued an "interpretation" of the board's factual statement that processing taxes have played a part in the decline of certain industries.

"The situation is that, in efforts to anticipate processing taxes so as to avoid payment while possible, mills in both flour and textile industries enormously increased their activity before wheat and cotton taxes and the increased war costs under NRA went into effect," said Mr. Wallace.

IDENTIFY 3 IN JAIL AS INDIANA BANK ROBBERS

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 27.—(P)—Chief of Detectives Fred Montgomery announced tonight that three men held in jail had been identified as having participated in the robbery of the Western State bank of South Bend, Ind., Tuesday, in which $2,500 was taken.

Henry Nelmeick, cashier of the bank, and Adam Woloszyn, a bank messenger, Montgomery said, pointed out Louis Badgett of Galesburg, Ill.; Howard McDonald of St. Louis, and Don Potter of Champaign, Ill., as three members of the quartet of bandits who invaded the bank.

Badgett and McDonald were arrested with four other persons in Kankakee, Ill., Wednesday. Potter, Montgomery said, was picked up on a Peoria street yesterday and lined up with the sextet in the showup tonight.

ALICE ROOSEVELT SEARS NOTABLES OF FORMER DAYS

Writes in Magazine with Amazing Frankness.

New York, Oct. 27.—(Special.)—Seeing the New Deal as nothing but a show from which "we might as well get what entertainment we may," Alice Roosevelt Longworth, eldest daughter of former President Theodore Roosevelt and once the beloved Princess Alice of the nation, has written her reminiscences, out today by Scribner's, under the title, "Crowded Hours."

Princess Alice lambastes many of the important men and women in public life in those twenty-seven years, though she excepts her particular branch of the Roosevelt family, together with a few faithful incense burners.

"Harding was not a bad man; he was merely a stob," is a pretty good example of the Rooseveltian frankness in her book.

And of Mrs. Harding: "She (Mrs. Harding) told us, rolling an eye that never quite met ours, that she kept a little red book which contained the names of the people who had not been civil to her and 'Warren Harding' since they came to Washington. She usually spoke of Mr. Harding as 'Warren Harding.' It is impossible to convey her pronunciation of the letter 'R' in print. Something like 'Wur-reen-har-ding'."

Disregard of Liquor Law.
Her description of White House drinking is particularly lively. "Through violation of the 18th amendment was a matter of course in Washington. It was rather shocking to see the way Harding disregarded the constitution. He was sworn to uphold. Though nothing to drink was served downstairs, there were always, at least before the unofficial dinners, cocktails in the upstairs hall outside the President's room and guests were shown up there instead of waiting below for the President."

"One evening while one was in progress, a friend of the Hardings asked me if I would like to go up to the study. I had heard rumors and was curious to see for myself what truth there was in them. No rumor could have exceeded the reality; the study was filled with crones, Daugherty, Jess Smith, Alec Moore, and others, the air heavy with tobacco smoke, trays with bottles containing every imaginable brand of whisky stood about, cards and poker chips ready at hand—a general atmosphere of waistcoat unbuttoned, feet on the desk, and the spittoon alongside."

Sees Congressmen Deteriorate.
She notices a great "deterioration" in senators and congressmen and blames the "direct primary" for a good deal of it.

"In recent years it has become the habit of housewives to turn to the press for the guests who will make their parties interesting," she comments. "Now the members of the Brain Trust and other New Dealers are the prizes."

Of the famous Dolly Gann-Alice Longworth battle for precedence, she says quite frankly it grew out of the refusal of Speaker Longworth to attend.

DETROIT STRIKING TOOLMAKERS BREAK WINDOWS IN PLANT

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 28 (Saturday).—(P)—Several hundred men gathered early today around two plants where tool and die makers are on strike, overturning automobiles of four workmen and breaking scores of windows in one factory.

Police posted heavy guards around other plants where strikes are in progress.

The first demonstration occurred at the Briggs body plant, where a crowd of workmen was blocked. One automobile was overturned and Harry Harding, a workman, cut by flying glass. His car was burned.

Police dispersed the demonstrators, most of whom reappeared a short time later at the Federal Engineering company plant. There three cars were overturned and many windows broken by rocks.

The sudden outbreak of violence came only a few hours after optimistic statements had been issued by both employers and strikers following a conference.

The disturbances came soon after a meeting of 3,000 strikers had adjourned.

advance a dinner party which he knew in tend would be both "dull and dry." He used the precedence matter merely as an excuse not to bore himself.

She has very little to say of the Coolidges, although she does tell of an all night poker party on the way back from Maine at which Calvin Coolidge, although not participating, contributed his bit in interest and dry humor, as liquid refreshments flowed freely. Calvin Coolidge paid no attention to this, even though Wayne E. Wheeler, on the same train, almost caught the whole party at their worst.

Coolidges and Hardings.
"The first time we went to the White House after the Coolidges were there the atmosphere was as different as a New England front parlor is from the back room of a saloon," she says.

Although she openly admits her dislike for the Hardings, she tells of many poker sessions at her home, and she says, "although Mrs. Harding did not play, she always came, too, and the job of the 'duchess,' as she was called, was to 'lend her' Harding and the others would say when they wished another drink, 'duchess, you are lying down on your job.'"

Hoover gets short shrift and she admits her personal glees when Woodrow Wilson defeated Hughes in 1916. Mrs. Longworth tells with the most unbounded approval that had her father been elected on the Progressive ticket in 1912 he would have led the country immediately into war.

T. R. Wilson, and the World War.
In 1914 Wilson's reluctance to engage in the conflict was looked upon by the Roosevelt family as the most contemptible form of cowardice, and they felt the same way about Wilson's course in Mexico.

She says of her father when Wilson loitered in declaring war: "For many months father had been perfecting his plan to raise a division. The day saw two brothers, relations with Germany in February he had offered the services of his division to the government. As the weeks passed and we did not declare war he became more and more exasperated with the delay."

"He talked of everything, but most about the four boys, with a grim elation at the thought that they would soon all be in the war. He said how certain it was that several, perhaps all, would be wounded, possibly killed."

PROMISES CASH SCHOOL PAY DAY LATE NEXT WEEK

Needed $1,971,567 in Sight, McCahey Says.

James B. McCahey, president of the board of education, gave assurance yesterday that the two weeks' cash pay day for the 14,000 teachers and 4,000 other school employees will be forthcoming by the end of next week. State Auditor Barrett is expected to turn over $100,000 from the state common school fund to the Chicago schools today.

This additional sum will bring the school board within $127,567 of the $1,971,567 needed to meet the pay for the last half of February of this year. The cash available now, counting in the payment from the state today, totals $1,744,000, divided as follows: Cash on hand, $44,244; sale of warrants to the telephone company, $688,000; the state distributive fund, $500,000.

Finds Progress Satisfactory.
"Our negotiations for the rest of the money needed are proceeding in a satisfactory manner," said Mr. McCahey. "There appears to be no doubt about the distribution of the pay checks next week."

After the pay day the board will owe its employees approximately $20,000,000 for their services in 1933. The last of the pay roll obligations for 1933 was cleaned up in May, when Mayor Kelly engineered a sale of tax anticipation warrants to the extent of more than $12,000,000 to the banks.

Teachers Start Warrant Sale.
A new committee of representatives of teacher organizations to sell warrants at par was announced yesterday. The committee, headed by Mrs. Mahlin, secretary of the Chicago High School Teachers' association, will appeal to corporations and business men to purchase the warrants from the committee, which has established headquarters at 135 North Wabash avenue, telephone Franklin 7233.

The teachers were given 1933 tax anticipation warrants of the educational fund as pay in lieu of cash for the last half of January and the first half of February of this year. The latest quotation on the warrants is 88 cents on the dollar.

Desk Sergeants Warned to Be Polite to Everybody

Desk sergeants in the division commanded by Supervising Capt. Ira McDowell must practice politeness. The captain so ordered yesterday. No matter how busy a desk sergeant may be, he must be courteous to any one calling on the phone or in person, the captain said. And the captain says desk sergeants guilty of impoliteness will be fined two days' pay.

OPPOSE LARGE WAGE BOOSTS IN BUILDING TRADES

Business Men Say Unions' Stand Perils Revival.

Leaders among Chicago business men oppose large increases in existing wage scale agreements for all building trades unions in the city, asserting that 120,000 mechanics normally employed in construction work now are jobless and will continue without jobs if building costs are increased. This became known yesterday as details of the demands by plasterers' and others' unions for an increase of 24 1/3 per cent in the hourly wages were made public.

Contractors and leaders of industry assert that they fear the result of boosting construction costs at a time when federal agencies are seeking to revive building in Chicago and give jobs to tradesmen, many of whom have been without jobs for three years.

The recent strike of union laborers and plasterers in Chicago who demand that they be granted wages of $12 a day, even if the building code now before the NRA officials sets a six hour day as the maximum, is the opening wedge of a campaign to increase substantially all building wages, the business men say.

Get $1.50 an Hour Now. Wages paid plasterers and lathers, like all other building mechanics in Chicago are now $1.50 an hour, for an eight hour day. This scale was agreed upon recently when workers protested against the wage of $1.37 an hour prevailing until a month ago.

Those who oppose the wage increases point out that if the plasterers gain their increase to a $13 day for six hours of work, their scale will amount to $2 an hour. Because Chicago is a "level wage" city—meaning that all building tradesmen are paid on the same wage scale regardless of the type of work they do—all other mechanics would have a basis for demanding the same pay.

Contractors assert that such wages are "exorbitant" and "outrageous." They say that the actual wages prevailing until last July were around 75 cents an hour. These were the wages paid to building mechanics who could find jobs. Fewer than 2,000 all told could find work and these men were all willing to ignore the scales set by the unions and accept what they could get by individual bargaining with employers in most cases, it was explained.

See Hindrance to Building. An increase in wages of $1.25 an hour over last summer's scales would throttle any renewal of building activity here, it was said. Even though federal funds have been appropriated for construction of apartments and dwelling houses in slum districts, and also for the construction of sub-postal stations in large cities throughout the country to replace buildings rented for this use, they would be insufficient to complete these works if the wage increases were put through, according to contractors.

Much of the opposition to the increases comes from the building contractors' association and from the Association of Commerce members, who say that they are preparing to take definite action to prevent establishment of "unusually high wages" in the building industry's NRA code. The business men say that they are willing to see wages increased to a small extent if employment is spread throughout the ranks of the building mechanics. Such increases, they say, should not bring wage scales to much above $1 an hour. On this basis, they assert, building will be revived, more tradesmen will be put to work, and the purchasing power of a larger percentage of the total number of unemployed men will be restored.

sufficient for one man's troubles. In the past, when a Republican administration was in power in Cicero, Cowen was in favor. When a Democratic administration came in he made peace of a sort with its members, but it was known that State's Attorney Courtney was harassing him in his handbooking and slot machine racket, raiding his places frequently and forcing him to do his business furtively.

The episode of the attempted kidnapping took place about four months ago. Cowen's brother-in-law, Leroy Decker, who resembled the publisher and was wearing his hat, was seized in Cicero by four men who demanded $50,000 ransom. Only after long argument could Decker, who had been locked up in the lair of the abductors, convince them that it was a case of mistaken identity and that no ransom would be paid. He was then released.

Since that time Cowen had been fearful. His engaged Corngold to guard him and he exercised unusual care in moving about. As to his movements yesterday afternoon, it is known that he was at the Sportsman's Park race track, in which he had invested $55,000, until after 5 o'clock. He then drove to the vicinity of the theater and, it was said, visited a gambling house in the neighborhood. He was suddenly on his way home when killed.

At midnight, six hours after the killing, the police raided the alleged gambling house at 537 West Roosevelt road, at which Cowen and Corngold had stopped. By that time all the paraphernalia except one roulette wheel had been removed. The keepers and patrons were all gone.

Only $2.25 in Pockets. Although Cowen usually carried several thousand dollars with him, the Cicero police found only $2.25 in his pockets. His two diamond rings, diamond belt buckle, jeweled watch chain and diamond studded watch were on the body when it was examined at the hospital. It was possible, his friends said, that Cowen had left his money in the gambling house, but the police professed to have no knowledge of this if it were true.

The early career of Cowen, who was only 37 years old, had a copybook flavor. He was one who rose early and worked hard. He was a newspaper man, a caller in railroad yards and a tailor in his spare time. His energy and his thrift, derived from an ancestry of Scottish Jews, won him financial success. But until around 1920, when Capone became the boss of the Chicago gang, Cowen was a red sweater and made no pretensions, not even enough to match the wealth he had. Even then he had large realty holdings.

Capone Makes Him Bondsman. Al Capone, establishing his headquarters in Cicero, took a liking to the little news agent. He threw opportunities to make money in his way. He appointed him chief bondsman.

Cowen was the man to take advantage of such opportunities. Some years ago, when Albert Anselmi and John Scialli, Capone gangsters, were charged with murder, it was Cowen who appeared in court with $50,000 in real cash and the backing of real estate for $200,000, that the pair might be released on bonds. Scialli and Anselmi, escaping the

U. S. Seizes Touhy Gangster as Murder Jury Acquits Him

James Ryan, a member of the Touhy gang, was acquitted of murder yesterday by a jury in the Criminal court of Judge James Farley. Immediately federal agents seized him on a warrant charging participation in a mail robbery in St. Paul.

Ryan will be taken to the Twin Cities to join his chief, Roger Touhy, and Willie Sharkey, Edward [Father Tom] McFadden, and Gus [Johnny] Gus Schaefer, all bosses in the Touhy gang, who are held there for the kidnaping of William Hamm Jr., wealthy brewer. Schaefer and his wife, Ida, have also been identified as participating in a Sacramento, Cal., mail robbery.

Witness Falls State. The acquittal of Ryan yesterday came after the state's only witness declared that he could not identify the gangster as the slayer of John R. Nellis, a roadhouse owner. The witness was Wesley Maitland, 60 years old, a porter employed by Rineola.

The prosecution declared that Maitland had previously identified Ryan as the killer. Judge Farley refused to grant a defense motion for a directed verdict of not guilty and the case went to the jury. With Scott Stewart, attorney for the Touhy gang in the St. Paul case, represented Ryan in the murder trial.

Ryan is under two convictions in Lake county, Illinois, one for gun-toting, for which he was sentenced to serve four months at the Vandalia prison farm, and the other for removing numbers from a pistol, which brought a sentence of ninety days. United States Marshal H. C. W.

courts, have long since been eradicated by gang bullets. Capone went to prison for evading income taxes. Cowen went on; not even the depressed state of the economy could take away his fortune, estimated at from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

Twice Cowen was married. His first wife, Sarah, divorced, lives with her two children at 2434 South 60th avenue, Cicero. She wept last night when she heard of the killing.

"Why should anybody want to kill him?" she asked. "He was good and kind to everybody; to nobody more than to us."

Cowen resided with his second wife, Mildred Decker Cowen, in the Graceland hotel at 118 North Homan boulevard. She was formerly a manicurist at the Hotel Sherman, where he met her. For her Cowen had purchased $30,000 worth of diamonds, and had made out a $20,000 life insurance policy.

The widow was hysterical when she heard of the slaying.

In Best of Spirits. "My husband talked to me about noon," she said. "He seemed to be in the best of spirits and he told me he was going to a jeweler's to buy me a gift, but that he was in a hurry because he had to get to the race track early."

"I don't know a thing about his connection with gambling, if there was one. I knew him only as the publisher of the Cicero Tribune. He didn't talk about business with me."

The investigators learned that Cowen was prepared to go into a syndicate, investing $80,000 of his own money, in a dog race track to be established just over the Indiana line. No one would hazard a guess as to whether this had any bearing on his death. Cowen's paper, the Cicero Tribune, is a weekly publication, issued in tabloid form.

LITVINOV RUSHES THROUGH POLAND ON WAY TO U. S.

WARSAW, Poland, Oct. 27. (AP)—Maxim Litvinov, Russian foreign commissar, arrived late tonight from Moscow and departed an hour later for Berlin without revealing what ship he will take for the United States, where he will discuss Soviet-American relations with President Roosevelt.

Stalling and jovial, but firmly uncommunicative, the Soviet envoy said: "I won't give out interviews on political matters until I get back to the American government."

Litvinov said he was still undecided what he will sail on or what will be his port of departure. He said that he added that he might sail on an Italian vessel.

Another hoodlum accused of participation in the St. Paul robbery is Frank McKee, now held by Salt Lake City authorities. The holding of the two by federal agents is another step in the investigation which has shown that the Touhy gang was connected with a large number of mail robberies.

In the final solving of these robberies the federal investigators hope also to solve the murder of Gus Winkler, north side gang leader, on Oct. 3, and information concerning the supposed suicide of Edgar Lebensberger, wealthy night club owner.

Both of these men with John J. [Boss] McLaughlin and Joseph Sans, a gambling house employee, were indicted as conspirators in the disposal of the loot of a Chicago mail robbery committed last December. The latter pair was held by federal agents who feared they might be molested by the same men who killed Winkler. Last Tuesday the bond of McLaughlin was reduced from $50,000 to $25,000 and he was freed after posting security. Sans won a similar reduction yesterday and also was released after posting bond.

They were seized at Hermitage avenue and Madison street by Sgt. John Gapsinski's squad. They carried a pair of brass knuckles and a gun. The boys, Sgt. Gapsinski said, admitted they had intended to rob the B & B restaurant, Madison street and California avenue.

John Falla, 24 years old, 1008 Milton street, was sentenced to ninety days in the county jail for contempt yesterday by Judge Michael Feinberg of the Criminal court for giving false testimony in behalf of four men charged with automobile theft.

Miss Angelina Barbara, 23, of 1815 Clybourn avenue, who gave similar testimony, was ordered held until Monday when she and two other women will be cited for contempt.

The four defendants in the auto theft case were Henry Gioe, 20 years old; Sam Muscio, also 20; Peter Pasentino, 19, and Victor Zangarelli, 17. On their pleas of guilty, Judge Feinberg sentenced Gioe and Muscio to terms of 1 to 20 years each in prison; Pasentino sixty days in the Bridewell, and put Zangarelli on probation.

They were charged with stealing a car owned by Marcus Bell, 3047 North Clark street. Arraigned in court, the youths pleaded not guilty, and Falla and Miss Barbara testified that the defendants were in the Barbara home at the moment the car was stolen. In spite of this testimony, the defendants shortly afterward pleaded guilty. Then Judge Feinberg sentenced Falla and ordered Miss Barbara locked up.

AIRPLANE JOINS INDIANA TROOPS IN BANDIT HUNT

"Shoot to Kill" Is Order to All Officers.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 27.—(Special.)—A sedan, bearing six men and with Illinois license plates 745-746, which eluded police in Richmond today, was the center of a bandit chase conducted by National Guardsmen, state police, and authorities of several cities and counties.

Observed cruising about Richmond, the sedan was sought by the Wayne county sheriff and by Richmond police. It did not halt on command and, after twisting about the streets of Richmond, was lost. In South Bend a large sedan containing five men, believed members of the convict gang, attempted to force an armored express pay roll truck to the curb, but a street car spoiled the plan and the auto sped away.

Lieut. Howard Maxwell left Indianapolis in a National Guard airplane to scout the triangular area of Connersville, Richmond and Indianapolis, and squads cars were posted on the eastern edge of the city.

Receive Underworld Tip.

An underworld tip that the bandits intended to strike at Richmond or Connersville, near Richmond, stirred officers when the sedan was seen.

Then Donald Jorja, 7, was reported kidnapped at Terre Haute by a man and woman. The boy had been picked up by an auto, but without any intentions of kidnapping. These two forays constituted the first tests of the state's newly organized forces for coping with the bandits who have been robbing banks and terrorizing the communities for weeks.

The state's normal force of local and state police was augmented by a squad of undercover men, assisted by the United States government, by more than 600 trained marksmen from the Indiana National Guard, and by another army of "minute men" members of the American Legion.

"Shoot to kill" was the order to all. As a result Gilbert Tuzigle, 24, rifle five from justice attempting to elude Indianapolis policemen, was shot and killed in an alley here today. He was stealing an auto battery and had served an eighteen month burglary sentence at Frankfort, Ky.

Ordered to Search Fort Buildings.

Military authorities at Fort Benning Harrison near here ordered search of all buildings on the reservation on reports that men corresponding in appearance to some of the escaped convicts had been seen in the vicinity.

Gov. Paul V. McNutt extended his original order to permit Al Feeney state safety director, and Elmer E. Straub, adjutant general, to draw on the whole of the National Guard for the selected squads who will hunt for the bandit hunt. A mobile machine gun company of guardsmen will be stationed with each police unit.

All Criminals Warned.

Minor criminals were advised by Feeney to give the augmented state police force a wide berth. Minor criminals should be warned for the safety of their own lives that the state of Indiana means business," he said. "State police are now backed up by a shotgun army, seventy units of expert guardsmen sharpshooters with machine guns and high powered rifles, and the county units of minute men for highway blockades."

MURDER OF CAFE OWNER BLAMED ON GAMBLING WAR

Police yesterday sought a motive for the murder of Fatsy Damato, 40 years old, a cafe owner, who was killed earlier in the day in his cafe at 4559 Diversey parkway by one of six men. According to Sgt. Martin Cavanaugh of the Cragin police Damato was shot to death in an alleged break with a syndicate controlling racing bets. Witnesses said that Damato had been seated at a table playing cards with Joseph Valentine, 1731 North Lorain avenue, leader of an orchestra in the cafe. Six men entered and stood for a short time drinking at the bar. One of the men then walked over to Damato and shot him twice in the back. The six men, all of whom were neatly dressed, then fled.

CONVICT SLAIN, 1 SHOT TRYING TO FLEE PRISON

Trouble Over Before Troops Arrive.

Walla Walla, Wash., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Four dangerous convicts, making a break from the Washington state penitentiary here, were halted by a rain of bullets which killed one and critically wounded another. The three survivors were recaptured.

Donald F. Collins, 21, serving 10 years from Clallam county for assault, was slain.

James Penning, 37, apparently the leader of the plot, officers said, was wounded in the head. Penning was serving 20 to 30 years for robbery.

Sentenced to Life.

James McCourt, 27, sentenced to life imprisonment for first degree murder, and Carl Brenan, serving 10 to 25 years for robbery, fled from the prison wall when guards' guns began firing.

The convicts working in the prison commissary department, out the bars in the window of the vegetable cellar and escaped into the yard. With an improvised ladder about 20 feet long, they started scaling the outer wall.

Toppled Outside Wall.

Collins was on top of the wall, and Penning was near the top. The ladder when guards discovered them and opened fire. Collins' body crumpled outside the blast of lead, and toppled outside the wall. Penning, wounded in the head, crashed inside the yard. The other two fled back from the wall.

As the penitentiary siren started screaming members of the Washington National Guard armed and rushed for the prison, but sheriff's officers and prison guards said the outbreak was crushed before they arrived.

Second Verdict Attributes Jail Death to Alcoholism

A Lake county coroner's jury under Coroner John L. Taylor, returned an unchanged verdict yesterday in the reopened inquest into the death of Alphonsus Hendrick, 47 years old, a garage owner of Glenview, who died Oct. 11 in the Highland Park police station. Yesterday's verdict, like the original one, was that Hendrick died of acute dilation of the heart, superinduced by alcoholism. The new inquest had been asked by Joseph E. Brown, attorney for the Chicago Motor club.

GRUNDHOEFER ON STAND TELLS OF SLAYING BANKER

It Was an Accident, Plea of Young Gunman.

Carl Grundhofer, 29 years old, took the witness stand yesterday in the Criminal court of Judge William V. Brothers and admitted that he held the shotgun that killed Harry Mueller, cashier of the First National bank of Niles Center.

Grundhofer, John Schack, who has been sentenced to die for the murder of Policeman John G. Savick, and Frank Keglitz are on trial before a jury for the murder that occurred during a robbery of the bank last April 7.

Grundhofer testified that the bank robbery took place on April 6 as he talked with Schack and a third man, known as "Hod," in front of the Schack home at 5040 Wellington avenue. The "Hod" mentioned is presumably Roman Flakora, alleged member of the bankit gang, who has not been apprehended, but Grundhofer refused to identify him under that name.

Grundhofer testified that the bank robbery took place on April 6 as he talked with Schack and a third man, known as "Hod," in front of the Schack home at 5040 Wellington avenue. The "Hod" mentioned is presumably Roman Flakora, alleged member of the bankit gang, who has not been apprehended, but Grundhofer refused to identify him under that name.

His Testimony Aids Keglitz.

Keglitz, a friend of many years, drove up, the witness said, and the quartet drove to the Niles Center bank, where Schack changed a ten dollar bill to "spot the place." They returned to the bank the next day, Grundhofer said. He, Schack, and "Hod" entered the bank and the robbery followed.

Cross-examined by Attorney James M. Burke, representing Keglitz, Grundhofer said that although Keglitz had driven the car he did not know that a robbery was planned until after it was over. Keglitz followed instructions of Schack without asking questions, Grundhofer said.

Keglitz, who alleges having testified the night of a robbery, an old boy, had taken the stand and denied knowledge of the robbery in halting answers.

"They didn't tell me nothing of anything," he declared, under questioning by Attorney Burke.

Keglitz said that he had driven Schack and the others to the bank to get change on the day before the robbery and again drove the bankit gang to the bank on April 7, when Schack said he "needed more change." Not until they had returned to the garage did he know there had been a robbery and murder, Keglitz said.

"What did you do with the $705 they gave you?" Attorney Burke inquired.

"I took it home," Keglitz answered. "The next day Hod came over and said that he and Schack would keep it for me. I gave him all but $5 and I haven't seen him since."

The witness seemed amazed at the

TWO TORTURE SLAYERS SENTENCED TO DIE IN CHAIR DECEMBER 22

Newton, Ill., Oct. 27.—(Special.)—Harry Shelby of Tilton and his nephew, John Allen, Danville, were sentenced to die in the electric chair at Chester, Dec. 22 for torture, murder of Mrs. Mary Schrader, 52, wealthy widow.

Shelby made a dramatic gesture for the freedom of his nephew.

"The kid is innocent; you've put too much on him (Allen). I'm guilty, but I made the kid go with me. He didn't know he stickup plans," Shelby said. Judge Thomas Jett of Hillsboro explained that sentence was fired by the jury.

Since a jury of farmers found Shelby guilty a week ago he has been busy day and night writing the story of his life.

"I've killed six persons, one for each time they put me in the hole at Chester. Four of the murders are still unsolved and I'm going to tell all about them," he said.

Laughter that followed this admission.

Frank Novak, 15 years old, the "bicycle burglar," was sentenced to one year to life yesterday by Judge Walter P. Steffen for the burglary of the home of Charles Allen, 3343 Danville. This sentence and four others yesterday brought to 451 the number of criminals sentenced since the opening of the crime war. The others sentenced are:

JAMES ROBERTS, 17 years old, and CURTIS BUCHANAN, 17 years old, sentenced by Judge Sullivan to serve one year to life for the robbery of an A. & P. store at 4552 Cottage Grove avenue.

OSMUND A. SPANGLER, 20 years old, sentenced by Judge James F. Farley to serve one to 20 years for the 60 cent robbery of William Fowler, 922 West 68th street.

HAROLD TUTENSKY, 20 years old, and LOUIS MENDELSON, 20, each sentenced to 1 year to life by Judge Donald McKinlay. They were convicted of robbing Harry Bucknam, 3535 Carroll avenue, of $350 on Aug. 26.

GUN TOTER FREED DUE TO SUPREME COURT'S DECISION

Recent decisions of the Illinois Supreme court in reversing gun convictions against Murray Humphries and "Machine Gun Jack" McGurn were quoted yesterday by Judge Joseph McGarry as he discharged Charles (Babe) Barron, alleged west side hoodlum, on a similar charge.

The case was dismissed on the defense motion to suppress the evidence because Sgt. William Drury had no search warrant when he found Barron carrying a revolver on Oct. 13.

"I believe the court should give the police more leeway, particularly in searching well known police characters," Assistant State's Attorney Morris Meyers said. "I think the courts should have the courage to uphold the police."

"I have the courage," responded Judge McGarry. "But I believe the law should be enforced regardless of the defendant's reputation. Furthermore, I see no reason in wasting the taxpayers' money in making decisions that will be reversed by the Supreme court."

U. S. Files Income Tax Lien Against Gambler

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 27.—(AP)—An income tax lien for $1,258 was filed today by V. Y. Dallman, collector of internal revenue, against Harry Mordock, Madison county gambler, for additional 1930 income.

MOVE TO DEPORT TORRIO, FORMER VICE KING HERE

Capone's Predecessor Is Now Living in East.

The federal government, it was disclosed in Washington dispatches last night, is seeking to deport John Torrio, who once bossed Al Capone and preceded him as czar of Chicago's booze and vice rackets.

Torrio was born in Italy, but is a naturalized American citizen. Evidence has been obtained, it was understood, to show that Torrio gave false facts as to his residence when he applied for citizenship and therefore is guilty of perjury and liable to deportation.

Torrio faded from Chicago in 1925 when the gang war was at its height. He was shot and almost killed about three months after the death of Dion O'Banion, north side gangster, who was assassinated in his flower shop, presumably by Torrio-Capone hoodlunk. After Torrio recovered from his wounds he wasted no time in moving back east. He is now said to have a home at White Plains, N. Y. His last public appearance here was during the Capone trial two years ago when he was subpoenaed as a government witness.

Government agents in Chicago investigating Torrio's affairs for the last few months have found only two criminal convictions against him, both for liquor law violations and both on pleas of guilty. On Dec. 17, 1923, he pleaded guilty to possessing, transporting, and manufacturing liquor before Federal Judge William. He was fined $5,000. Two years later, on Jan. 11, 1925, two weeks before he was shot, Torrio pleaded guilty to liquor conspiracy before the late Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe and was fined $5,000 and sentenced to serve nine months in jail.

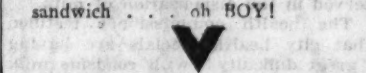

Felony Mark on Record.

Although the second conviction placed a felony mark on Torrio's record, this was not enough to warrant deportation. The statute rules that the moral turpitude must be shown to sustain deportation action and it has been held, the investigators said, that liquor violations do not constitute such a crime.

In his younger days—he is now in his late forties—Torrio was a member of the Five Points gang in Brooklyn. He arose to such prominence in criminal circles that when "Big Jim" Colosimo, Chicago's south side vice lord, needed a bodyguard he sent for Torrio.

5 PERSONS HURT IN WISCONSIN BY FARM PICKETERS

Milk Supply Is Cut Off in Some Sections.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 27.—[Special.]—Reports of tightening of picket lines and stoppage of the movement of farm products to market came from distant parts of the state tonight, but in Milwaukee county and the thickly populated southeastern section of the state there was little evidence that a farm strike had been in operation for nearly a week.

Five persons were reported injured in the strike sections.
Although the Wisconsin milk pool is not formally on strike until next Tuesday, many of its members were joining the National Farm Holiday association in sections where that organization is active.

Charles Dineen, secretary of the Milwaukee Cooperative Milk Producers' association, said that today's receipts here were normal. Milwaukee area producers were not joining the strike.
The most violence reported today was at Manitowoc. Two men, one a milk truck guard and the other a picket, were injured and taken to a hospital. The injured are Anthony Tuschel, 20, and Gerhard Hanson, both of Cato.

Truck Turns Over.
Tuschel was injured when the truck driven by William Baroun clipped a coach carrying several men and tipped over. He was thrown from the truck, striking his head. His condition is serious. Hanson was struck on the head by a truck driver at the White House condenser here when he attempted to dump the milk. He was less seriously injured.

Five hundred pickets guarded all roads leading into Manitowoc. Sheriff Herman Schuetz said he would not put the taxpayers to the expense of paying hundreds of dollars for deputies.

During the day several loads of milk consigned to Manitowoc dairies were dumped. Pickets on some roads placed spiked boards and railroad ties on the roads to stop incoming trucks. The dump was almost complete.

To Meet in Des Moines.

Arnold Gilbert, president of the Wisconsin group of the Farm Holiday association, left his home in Sand Creek today for Des Moines, Ia., where leaders of the organization will meet tomorrow. Walter Singler, head of the milk pool, who organized the previous milk strikes, said he was "just looking around until next Tuesday when the pool is expected to go into action in force."

On the Singler home farm near Chilton the event of the day was the seizing and dumping of several cans of milk, the entire output of the farm operated by Charles Singler, father of the milk pool leader.

The elder Singler declared it was a frameup and Walter Singler began an investigation saying, "Some one will say for it."

The elder Singler said a truck resembling the one from the Moser cheese factory, where he ships, drove into his yard and seized the milk over this protest. There were a hundred pickets at the cheese factory and when the milk arrived it was seized and dumped.

Beaten: Condition Serious.

Marshfield, Wis., Oct. 27.—(P)—Beaten by farm strike pickets who asailed him with clubs, Ted Weber of Marshfield is in a serious condition in St. Joseph hospital here.

Warrants naming two men and designating three others as "John Doe" have been issued.

Weber was driving toward Marshfield from Tripoli with a truckload of fence posts when pickets stopped him. In intervals of consciousness he told of being clubbed and ordered to turn back. He drove to a farmhouse and collapsed.

Two Others Are Beaten.

Fond du Lac, Wis., Oct. 27.—[Special.]—Strike pickets closed in on Fond du Lac county this afternoon as first violence was reported in the vicinity of Eden where two truck drivers were beaten and their milk and cans dumped. One warrant was issued as a result, but the name of the man sought was withheld until he is arrested.

Anton Panuski, 45, and his hired man, Peter Inklein, were beaten. Both men's eyes were blackened. They claimed the pickets assaulted them with a hammer.

Madison Supply Shut.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Madison, Wis., Oct. 27.—[Special.]—Madison today was shut off from a large portion of its normal milk supply as a result of a blockade of pickets on all main highways of Dane county who stopped virtually all trucks and either turned them back or spilled the milk they were carrying.

Strike Fades in Iowa.

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 27.—(P)—Milo Reno, president of the National Farmers Holiday association, called his field generals to conference today as the association agricultural strike lost momentum in western Iowa and increased its effectiveness in north and central Wisconsin.

Reno said the organization's executive board was summoned to meet Sunday to draft farm relief proposals for presentation Monday at a conference of midwestern governors here.

Iowans Agree to Stop Picketing.

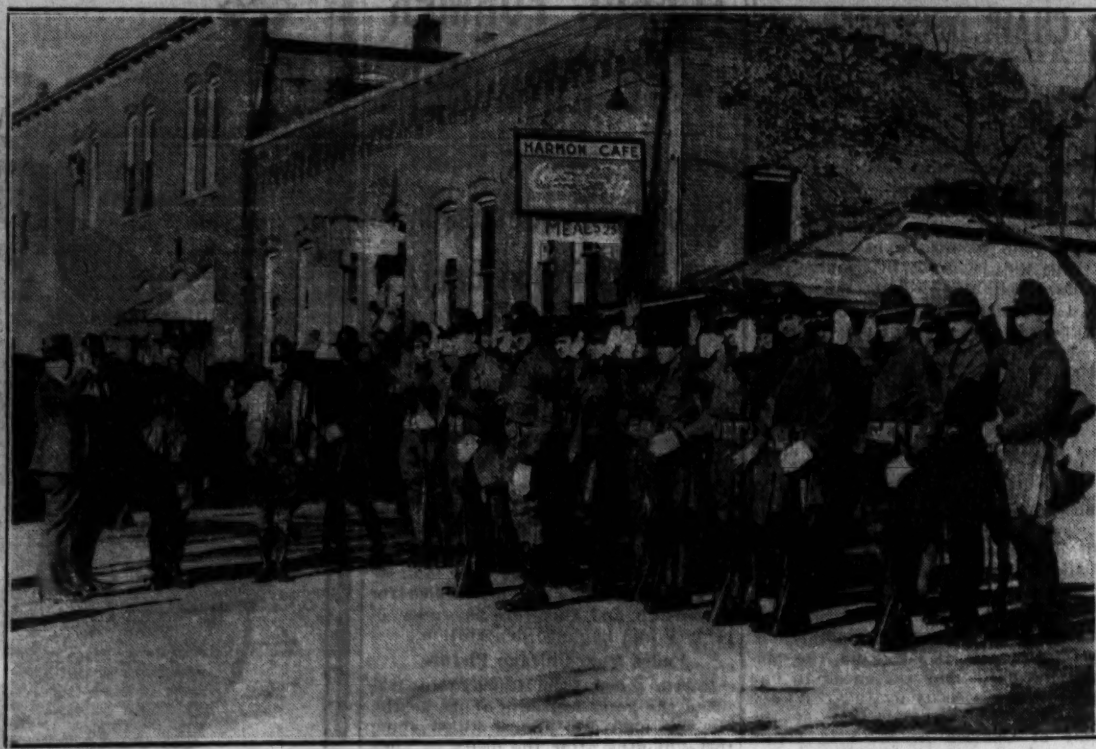

Council Bluffs, Ia., Oct. 27.—(P)—An agreement to cease picketing of roads to stop live stock trucks was signed here late tonight by representatives of the Farm Holiday association in Shelby, Harrison, and Pottawattamie counties and P. S. Peterson, president of the Southwestern Iowa Truckers' association. The agreement takes effect immediately.

Prisoners Fire Bedding;

Had to Put It Out or Roast

Bloomfield, Mo., Oct. 27.—(P)—While Sheriff George Barham and his deputy were away 16 prisoners in the Stoddard county jail stacked mattresses in a pile and set them on fire. Mrs. Barham, alone in the living quarters of the jail, instead of releasing the prisoners, as they expected, told them they could either put out the fire or roast. They extinguished the flames.

Mayor Kelly in Washington to Fight Higher Milk Price

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Washington, D. C., Oct. 27.—[Special.]—Mayor Edward J. Kelly today entered the complicated Chicago milk situation as the personal champion of the city's millions of consumers.

With Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Chicago health commissioner, the mayor appeared at the farm administration hearing of 29 independent Chicago milk dealers who are seeking a price differential in the federal milk code for cash and carry and delivered milk.

Tomorrow he is to call upon Farm Administrator George N. Peek with a request that the federal government proceed cautiously in its plans to boost retail prices in Chicago from ten to eleven cents a quart to give the farmer higher prices for his product.

Holds Boost Unwarranted.

"What I want to know," the mayor declared, "is why it is necessary to add one cent to the consumer price in order to get an increased price for the farmer. I believe there is enough cushion between the present farm price and the retail price to absorb the increase to the farmer without boosting the cost of milk to the consumer by a single cent."

Mayor Kelly did not take the stand at the hearing today. He had been scheduled to make a formal statement as to his position regarding the milk situation. But while he was absent briefly from the room the proceedings were adjourned until tomorrow.

In an intermission following the sudden adjournment, however, he set forth his attitude as follows:

"I am interested primarily in the cost of milk to Chicago's consumers. I want to see the farmer get better prices, of course, but my first concern is for the city dweller who has to have milk."

Wants Situation Aired.

"I want to know where the cushion is between what the farmer gets and what the consumer pays. I want the whole situation aired thoroughly, so

8,000 FARMERS PLEDGE AID FOR HOG, CORN PLAN

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 27.—(P)—Eight thousand Illinois farmers today heard their leaders explain the federal government's recovery program for corn and hog prices, then pledged their support to the measures.

The farmers, members of the Illinois Agricultural association, especially cheered the pronouncement of one of their members, Speaker Henry T. Rainey, when he said congress would force compliance with the program by the packers if they should prove recalcitrant.

The speaker also urged immediate recognition of Russia, stating it would be of immediate benefit to Illinois corn and hog raisers. "Russia alone," he said, "would buy the national surplus of pork."

As the farmers assembled many county delegations came bearing banners demanding 60 cent corn, others sought 70 cent corn, or federal loans in that amount on warehoused corn.

Earl Smith, president of the association, explained the government's program and respectfully urged the administration's immediate, continuing, and adequate support of the hog market and corn market until such a time as the permanent corn-hog program may be developed and become effective.

Speaker Rainey, who resides on a farm near Carrollton, Ill., told the farmers "the administration will find a way to put up farm prices, and if the present plan does not succeed some other way will be found."

Referring to recent farm strikes and industrial disorders, the speaker urged patience while federal authorities seek a solution.

In pledging support the association adopted the following resolution:

"We pledge our support to the administration's permanent hog-corn program and respectfully urge the administration's immediate, continuing, and adequate support of the hog market and corn market until such a time as the permanent corn-hog program may be developed and become effective."

Terrorism Grips Island;
General Strike Looms.

BY GUSTAVO RENO.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Oct. 27.—Climaxing the tense situation of past weeks, laborers and soldiers fought heated battles at two sugar mills today. The fighting occurred at Central Mabay in Oriente province, where eight persons were killed, and at the Central Cunaigua in Camaguey province, where five were killed. Numerous wounded were counted as the laborers surrendered. A worker was killed in a clash at Central Jaronu yesterday.

The workers had set up soviet governments at the centrals and refused demands to come out. The army brought up artillery from nearby towns and forced the laborers to surrender.

Island Faces General Strike.

Threats of a general strike throughout the island continue to worry President Ramon Grau San Martin. Chief of Police Ulecano Franco already has jailed more than 300 persons on charges of plotting a demonstration on International Red day, Nov. 7. The chief asserted the most active agitators are foreigners with criminal records.

C. M. Jervis, American manager of Central Alto Cedro, near Antilla, Orto, is being held captive. Workers today again prevented soldiers from rescuing him. The United States destroyer Twiggs is standing off Antilla ready to protect Jervis.

With the arrest at Calbarien of a Russian identified by police as a soviet agent, authorities believe they have uncovered a nationwide plot to establish a communist regime.

Bomb Shakes Havana.

The explosion of a bomb at La Casa de las Medias dry goods store shook Havana at 1:30 o'clock this morning and caused heavy damage to surrounding buildings. The store conducts a broadcasting station which has operated for the present government. The owner believes that last night's broadcast denouncing recent bombings motivated the attack.

Two street cars were derailed by small bombs. Street cars and trains are cruising slowly. Regular employees lay the blame on former co-workers who have been laid off.

Maj. Raimundo Ferrer, aid de camp to President Grau, accompanied by Lieut. Rodriguez Ochoa, left in an army plane at 11 o'clock this morning for Camaguey City to relieve Capt. Perez Garcia, chief of the military district. Some sources claimed that the military detachment at Camaguey is not in sympathy with the Grau government.

Paid attendance figures for A Century of Progress Exposition and for corresponding periods at the 1893 Columbian Exposition follow:

The Columbian Exposition opened May 1; A Century of Progress opened May 27.

BY EARL MULLIN.

A Century of Progress Exposition, the 1933 World's Fair, is expected to pass the total paid attendance of the Columbian Exposition of 1893 some time today, setting a new all-time record for American international exhibitions. The total of the 1893 Fair was 21,900,371, rolled up during 183 days. The total of the 1933 Fair up to 11:30 o'clock last night was 21,900,371. Given fair weather today, the necessary 160,000 paid admissions will be obtained, as the Saturday average is far in excess of that figure. Yesterday's attendance totaled 47,390 at 11:30 p. m.

While today is expected to see the Fair setting a new record for American exhibitions it will rate fourth among world exhibitions.

Exceeded by Three Fairs.

The three fairs exceeding the present Chicago Fair were all held in Paris. The American fair coming the closest to the 1893 record was the Columbian Exposition, and 183 days were needed to roll up that figure, whereas it is expected to be exceeded by the 1933 Fair in 155 days. With 15 days remaining before the 1933 Fair closes its gates on Nov. 12, even then remaining open 13 days less than the 1893 Exposition, it is clearly indicated that a marl far in advance of previous American records will be established.

The following table lists the American and foreign exhibitions in which the paid admissions came to more than five million, showing the number of days the exposition was open and the total attendance:

Paris	1889	210	37,287,000

Mayor Kelly Voices Pride.

"Today there will be recorded an event that should arouse the civic pride of every loyal citizen of Chicago," Mayor Kelly said in an official proclamation. "The attendance record of the World's Columbian Exposition is being broken—a record achieved by no other exposition in American history. Attendance at the 1933 Fair reached 21,900,371 in the 183 days of its glorious existence. Our Century of Progress is reaching that mark in 155 days and before the end on Nov. 12 will have established an all-time American exposition record."

"That A Century of Progress Exposition has been so successful, bringing visitors from all parts of our nation and from various countries of the globe and stimulating business not only in Chicago but all over the United States, should be a reason for real gratification to all of us. The indomitable I Will spirit has shown the world what it can do."

"The attendance in the last few weeks has also shown that Chicago is proud of its achievement and demands that the Fair be continued another year. Such continuance will mean much to us all—every branch of industry and business will benefit."

The mayor's proclamation ended with an appeal to all Chicago to run up a record breaking attendance during the last few weeks, which would assure the operation of the Fair a second year.

GRAF ZEPPELIN CHEF FILLS SHIP LARDER IN AKRON

Akron, O., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Just like a housewife, Chef Lloyd Scheuer of the world shuttling Graf Zeppelin went shopping today in Akron grocery stores, stocking up for the big ship's takeoff at 9 a. m. tomorrow for Friedrichshafen, Germany.

To see the load of edibles they stowed away in the hull of the huge dirigible today you'd think the supply would last much longer than the four days it will take the ship to make its home port.

There were beef tenderloins, chickens, ducks, fish, lobsters, German rye bread, rolls, pies, cookies, cauliflower, celery, Brussels sprouts, potatoes, grapefruit, oranges, bananas, and grapes.

The 22 passengers booked for passage to Seville, Spain, where the craft will moor on Monday, and Friedrichshafen, will board the craft shortly before the takeoff after it has been wheeled from the giant Goodyear Zeppelin airlock here.

When the Graf arrives in Germany, its Nazi emblem back in its homeland, it will have come close to the 500,000 mile mark in its many travels.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf, arrived in Akron from Chicago today by train. He had left his ship to inspect the World's Fair and receive honors prepared for him in Chicago.

Col. Green, Ft. Sheridan Commander, Transferred

Col. Joseph Green, acting commandant at Fort Sheridan, was notified yesterday that he had been transferred to the headquarters staff of the 8th corps area at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. He has been at Fort Sheridan since 1931, in command of the 61st coast artillery, an anti-aircraft unit. He will be succeeded as acting commandant by Maj. Harry V. Chamberlain when he leaves the fort sometime during the next week.

STRONG DEFENSE URGED IN NAVY DAY OBSERVANCE

Sham Battle Is Part of Program at Fair.

Navy day was celebrated throughout Chicago yesterday, reminding citizens that the blue-jackets and the floating armament stand as the first line of defense to protect their homes and business. All of the city joined in the celebration. There were ceremonies in the schools, but the principal program was held at the World's Fair.

In other cities throughout the United States similar programs were being given, and in various ports battleships and cruisers were opened to visitors during the day.

Rear Admiral W. T. Cluverius directed the program at the Fair and was host at a luncheon in the trustees' lounge of the Hall of Science, which opened the program. The speakers included Admiral Cluverius, Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Fair, and Judge John J. Sonsteyn of the Municipal court, representing Chicago.

Reopen Great Lakes, He Urges.

After Admiral Cluverius had welcomed the guests on behalf of the navy department, Judge Sonsteyn spoke, emphasizing the importance to Chicago of an adequate navy. Speaking on behalf of the mayor, who telegraphed from Washington regretting that he was unable to attend, Judge Sonsteyn urged the reestablishment of the Great Lakes training base. Pointing out that Chicago, with the development of the inland waterway, would become one of the greatest ports in the nation, Judge Sonsteyn said full naval defenses were of utmost importance to Chicago.

Others at the speakers' table at the luncheon included Harry S. New, United States commissioner to the Fair; Col. James M. Graham, representing the army; Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Dawes, and Mrs. Cluverius. After the luncheon a formal program was presented on the floating theater in the north lagoon and in the Federal building.

Sham Battle Is Staged.

The highlight of the afternoon program was the storming of the Federal building, where the "enemy" was encamped, by a landing force from the floating theater, which represented the deck of a battle cruiser for the battle exercises.

Machine guns, aircraft, heavy artillery and bombs were used by both sides. The landing forces ultimately "captured" the Federal buildings. After the sham battle speeches and vaudeville acts were given at the floating theater. Admiral Cluverius spoke on national defense, and Admiral W. H. Standley, chief of naval operations, spoke for Washington by radio. An address by Admiral David Sellers of the United States battle fleet was read by Capt. F. H. Robert, naval attaché to the Fair.

A program and tea celebrating Navy day were given in the Congress hall by the Women's Patriotic League of America. Capt. E. A. Evers, U. S. N., and Mrs. Evers were guests of honor.

The tour is sponsored by the Association of Commerce in conjunction with the Fair, and twenty-five buses will be needed for the trip. The party, in charge of Dr. Hugh Scott, superintendent of the hospital, will leave the hospital at 8:30 a. m. and will reach the Fair grounds about 10 o'clock.

GERMAN ENVOY BOARDS PLANE TO PHILADELPHIA

Dr. Hans Luther, German ambassador, left Chicago for Philadelphia by plane yesterday after participating in the welcoming ceremonies for Dr. Hugo Eckener at A Century of Progress on Thursday. Dr. Eckener had planned to remain overnight in Chicago and leave for Akron, O., to join the Graf Zeppelin there by plane today, but uncertain reports of yesterday's weather caused him to change his mind and he took the train to Akron at 11 p. m. Thursday. The Graf Zeppelin was refused yesterday and will take off from Akron for Friedrichshafen, Germany, via Seville, Spain, this morning at 8:30 o'clock.

4 ESCAPE FROM PRISON FARM.

Vandalia, Ill., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Vandalia prison farm officials today sought four men who escaped from the institution yesterday. Herbert Moton, 24, of Patoka, and Fred Fischer, 40, of Wink, escaped from the farm last yesterday, while William Brunner, 47, of Calumet City, and John Warfield, 46, escaped earlier in the day, officials said.

SISTERS GIVEN CANNING PRIZES AT WORLD'S FAIR

Mrs. Gertrude Beckman Klingberg, who lives on a farm near Beloit, Wis., grand champion, and her sister, Mrs. Kate Beckman Cooney, of Shiloh, Ill., runner-up in the annual international canning contest, were awarded prizes yesterday at a reception given for them and other canning winners in the Illinois Host building at the World's Fair. The contest is sponsored by the Ball Institute of Canning.

Mrs. Rufus Dawes, Mrs. Lennox Lohr, Mrs. Bertha Baur and others asked the two sisters how so much skill happened to center in one family. They explained that their mother, a German housewife, had taught them how.

Mrs. Klingberg said she killed 16 chickens before she got the jar containing eight breasts of chicken to her satisfaction. The judges had a difficult time deciding which chicken was the better, Mrs. Klingberg's or Mrs. Cooney's.

Raymond Thurlow, 12 years old, of Aurora, who canned rabbit won first prize of $10 in the boys' and men's class, was the only masculine winner among those on the platform.

Board Orders Ouster of 2 Cops for Intoxication

The civil service commission yesterday ordered the discharge of two policemen from the city force. The patrolmen, William P. Johnson of the Englewood station, and August C. Woerner of the East Chicago avenue station, had been charged with being intoxicated while on duty.

WEATHER MAP FORCES SETTLE TO DELAY FLIGHT

Dispatches from Washington yesterday said that Commander Settle will be stationed at the naval air station at Lakehurst, N. J., after his second stratosphere attempt. He has been stationed at the Goodyear Zeppelin company's hangar in Akron, O., for the last two years as inspector of gondolas carried by a balloon, for a while yesterday afternoon thought the weather would be right for his flight early today. INSULL SPRINGS COUP IN GREEK COURT HEARING

Puts In New Evidence at

fense, for in addition to the new documents, which were introduced by Insull's lawyers, Rhallys also told the court that he would give it a memorandum of all his arguments to help in drafting its decision.

Some of the defense rebuttal was not without originality and piquancy. For instance, Christus Ladass, a third Insull lawyer, analyzing the federal court's prosecution of Insull, declared: "The United States government wants to snare Insull back to the United States in order to lynch him and get the administration of his power companies out of his hands."

Appeals to "Humanity."

Rhallys' main appeal was to the humanity of the court.

"Don't extradite Insull, because it will be his crowning misfortune and he will not be able to survive," he cried.

Insull's lawyer even taunted Prosecutor Reganokos, saying he did not seem to believe in his own case. Ladass said:

"I do not recognize the prosecutor. His eloquence and convincing personality have failed him today."

"Fortunately, I will not lose any clients," Reganokos replied.

Insull's lawyers began interrupting the prosecutor frequently as he started speaking until the court finally said: "Do not interrupt. Make notes and talk later."

Reganokos, in his speech, said he should not have spoken again except for the fact that the defense had made many misrepresentations. He then proceeded to show how Insull, as the mysterious "S III," used to phone his broker and execute "wash sales"—that is, place a selling order and a buying order so the stocks looked active, but really there was no sale—to give fictitious values to his stock.

Says Insull Paid Banks.

Reganokos also stressed that Insull transferred securities for the express purpose of paying debts to banks, while he flouted and scorned small investors who lost all their savings by buying his stocks.

"The defense wants to know why Insull's creditors are not suing him?" Reganokos continued. "The reason is that there are about $300,000 of them and they cannot all come to Greece. If he wants to hear the cries of his victims, let him return to the United States."

The prosecutor then described how the Corporation Securities company differed from Insull's operating companies and was the peak of Insull's paper empire. Reganokos stated that Insull was gathering up the savings of small investors in his holding company, using the money to buy shares so he could control other subsidiary companies and keep them from falling into the hands of rivals.

Says Insull Harmed U. S.

Concluding, Reganokos said: "Insull has harmed his country and his fellow citizens, and I ask his delivery to the United States, which is a friendly country, to be tried for the charges against him. I am not asking that he be condemned."

"Why do you shun the justice of your country?" he asked, addressing Insull.

Then, turning to the judges, he ended:

"Honorable judges, turn him over to the justice of his country."

As the prosecutor finished Lazarinos was already on his feet beginning the strategic plan of slipping in new documents at the last minute. The main document was the balance sheet from Insull's bookkeeper.

Then he stepped forward and started handing out balance sheets of Corporation Securities company as of September, 1931, to show it still had plenty of assets to pay dividends.

Reganokos jumped up and said: "Here, I haven't seen that yet. You are trying to slip something over. You have always got something up your sleeve."

"We've got to keep our arms under cover until the last," spoke up Rhallys.

Canadian Judge Hints He May Refuse to Extradite Insull

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—(P)—A Canadian justice had under consideration tonight the motion of Cook county, Illinois authorities to have Martin J. Insull extradited to Chicago to face charges of embezzlement and grand larceny.

With the terse comment that there was doubt in his mind that Martin Insull's securities transactions, connected with the collapse of the huge Insull interests, could be termed theft, Justice A. C. Kingstone reserved judgment after arguments of rival counsel.

The judge gave no indication as to when he would pronounce judgment.

Row Over "Theft" Definition.

Insull's counsel had contended "theft" would be the Canadian judicial term for the charges against his client in Chicago.

Edward Bayley, Ontario attorney general who conducted the case for Cook county, contended that the taking over of Insull's securities by the Middle West Securities company when Insull was unable to pay margin requirements on them was "theft."

If such a transaction was a crime in both countries, he said, "it doesn't matter what you call it."

L. F. Hellmuth, one of the Insull counsel, replied that at the most there was only a "misuse of power" by Insull, the president of the Middle West Utilities.

Admits "Bad Loan."

"The money," said Hellmuth, "was advanced by the company to get hold of these securities which Insull perhaps did not want to be thrown on the market."

"Whether it was wise to advance so much money to employees is a question of policy. It may be a bad loan, but a bad loan does not become false pretences. There is an absolute absence of anything criminal."

J. C. McRuer, another Insull lawyer, said "a dangerous precedent" would be created if it were held that his client was liable for extradition.

The attorney told Justice Kingstone that such a ruling would be an entirely new interpretation of the law in Canada.

"These transactions are entirely out of the realm of theft," McRuer said. "To interpret them judicially as theft would be plowing entirely new ground on charges of theft in this country."

"We have the extradition treaty and the act in support of it, and who ever acts as charged may show—if they do not show the offense charged, there is no power in this court—the court is not required under the treaty to ask for surrender unless that is shown."

Says Insull Didn't Profit.

Referring to charges that Insull had used resources of his companies to cover his own stock market accounts, Mr. Ruer said:

"Supposing the syndicate had sold the securities a month later when the prices were higher—whose would have been the profit? The Middle West Utilities would have profited, but Martin Insull would not be any richer."

"Martin Insull would not have said that they were his securities. He did not profit by the transaction one iota. The Middle West Utilities purchased the securities from Insull's account—that is as far as the state can go—the securities would have been sold and thrown in the open market. The syndicate bought them, not wanting them thrown on the open market."

Tells of Huge Investments.

McRuer referred to the huge investments of the Insull companies.

"The Middle West was an investment company, taking investments, having margin brokers' accounts, and this creates a different situation than in the case of a company operating a flour mill, for instance," he said.

"The witnesses here from Chicago have testified there was nothing different in the transaction than in other cases where loans were made to employees collaterally secured."

"There was no falsification of records, entries or documents of any sort. I submit that in the authorities produced there can't be theft."

Hits at Testimony.

In reply Bayley said the witnesses who testified yesterday, both former office employees of the Middle West Utilities, had known nothing about the real nature of the transactions.

Martin Insull, he declared, had a private banking account.

"There was no resolution of the board of directors authorizing such an account," he said. "It was purely a private account. In spite of what his counsel have said about the value of those securities at the time they were purchased, they proved to be worthless."

"Insull procured the checks from the company and the syndicate was formed. The private account of Martin Insull was paid off by the company by the checks by which he covered the issue. They paid off a debt they had no right to pay. It was an illegal payment of the company's money."

Judge Disputes Point.

Justice Kingstone said the company apparently issued the checks through the usual channel.

"There must have been some authority for the issuance of those checks," the justice suggested. "There is no evidence before me of what the practice of the company was when there were payments to be made."

DESCRIBES LIFE WITH CHILDREN IN WHITE HOUSE

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt
Tells of Happy Days.

New York, Oct. 27.—[Special.]—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the President, yesterday described some of her White House days to an audience of several hundred high school students who are members of school Roosevelt clubs. She spoke at Roosevelt house, 48 East 20th street.

This was the first time that Mrs. Roosevelt, long noted for her reticence, had talked in reminiscent vein to a public gathering at Roosevelt house.

She began her speech with a reference to the navy after Rear Admiral Yates Sterling Jr. had stressed the late President's belief in a navy second to none.

Gloomy Place at First.

How Theodore Roosevelt's wife found the White House on her arrival the gloomiest place she ever saw and sent word to Oyster Bay, "Send me as many children as I can, possibly can," how she had great difficulty in preventing her children from being spoiled by White House attendants, and how, when she was very tired, their "nice little voices" reassured her.

These were among the glimpses of White House life which she related to her young hearers.

"I went to the White House so long ago that it seems now as if nobody in the world remembers it but me," she began.

She described how she and her husband received the news of the death of President McKinley in the Adirondacks camp where she had taken her children after an illness and where the camp kitchen was "always full of funny little trousers and skirts drying on the rack," because her children would fall into the headquarters of the Hudson.

Roosevelt Away on Mountain.

Mr. Roosevelt had departed on an overnight climb to Mount Marcy when he was alone at the camp when the news came, but guides soon carried the word up the trail and Mr. Roosevelt set out at once for Buffalo. His wife had to take "all those children" to Oyster Bay and then go on to Washington.

"Our arrival at the White House was one of the saddest things I have ever seen," she said. "It is fine if you go there on a wave of triumph, but it is very different if you arrive amid sorrow and loss and confusion of all kinds. I shall never forget the comfort I felt when I saw former President Cleveland, whom, of course, we knew very well."

"O, Mr. Cleveland," I cried, "my husband is so young!" He gave me a kind smile and said, "Don't worry. He's all right!"

Sends for Children.

"The White House was the gloomiest place when we went there! I hope none of you will ever go into a house so gloomy. Mrs. McKinley had been quite an invalid and there had been no children living there. It seemed all shut up and dark. My poor husband was so sad, so I sent word at once to Oyster Bay. 'Send me as many children as you possibly can.' After that it was better. They came with their pets, their dogs and guinea pigs, and we opened all the windows and let the sunshine in."

Then she described her family, the oldest girl 17 and the baby "just trotting around" when they went to the White House, though he was "quite a big boy" when they moved away.

"The White House was very gay in those years," she chattered on, smiling. "I can't tell you about all the pranks those children played. Boys are the same the world over, whether they are in the White House or in the country. You can read all about it in 'The White House Gang,' for that is absolutely true. My one prayer in those years was to prevent the children from being spoiled."

ANOTHER WOMAN DEAD OF RADIUM PAINT POISONING

Third of Five Doomed to Die Ten Years Ago.

East Orange, N. J., Oct. 27.—[Special.]—The third of five women doomed almost ten years ago to death by the slow action of radium poisoning reached the end of the road today.

Miss Grace Fryer, 35 now, and 16 years old when she started to work in the factory of the United States Radium corporation here, died this morning in the East Orange Homeopathic hospital.

For ten weeks she had been under intensive treatment in the hospital to stave off for a little longer the inevitable end of her disease.

Brace Supported Spine.

Up until last July, in spite of the steel brace clamped about her back to lend support to her spine, crumbling under the inroads of radium poisoning, she had worked daily in a Newark trust company.

Miss Fryer's case and those of four other women similarly poisoned came to public attention in 1927, when they brought suit for $1,250,000 against the radium corporation.

All had been workers in the factory, and all, after the custom of the operatives there, had dampened with their lips the brushes with which they applied radium paint to watch dials.

It was 1928 before their suits were settled with a grant of $100,000 to each of the women by the corporation, and an agreement to pay each $100,000 in five years.

One Dies First Year.

In that year, just as the suits were settled, Mrs. Quinta MacDonald, the first of the victims, died. This spring death claimed the second, Miss Catherine Schaub, once an instructor in the factory, who, ironically, had taught the girls to put the deadly poisoned brushes to their lips, ignorant of the fate that awaited her and some of her pupils.

The two others with whom the corporation made the settlement, Miss Alhina Larice and Mrs. Edna Hussman, are still alive today.

DEMAND CITIES SHARE LIQUOR TAX REVENUES

Municipal Experts Hear State Sale Plan.

Representatives of the cities of the United States yesterday decided to fight for a share of the revenue from taxation of liquor after the repeal of prohibition. Resolutions were adopted at a meeting of the American Municipal Association yesterday which protested against the proposed attempt of the federal government and states to grab all the revenue from this source.

Delegates to the convention, which is being held at the University of Chicago, pointed out that most of the responsibility for orderly liquor control will devolve upon the cities and villages of the nation. Moreover, it is just as important, they declared, that cities balance their budgets as that states and the national government do so.

Urges Sale by State Companies.

This action followed a speech by Prof. Marshall Dimock, department of political science at the University of Chicago in which he urged the establishment of state liquor corporations which would control the sale of liquor. He said this was the one sure means of control after repeal.

"A mere licensing system will not give adequate control if temperance is to be considered," Prof. Dimock told the delegates from thirty states who attended the meeting. "The system didn't work even before prohibition and the situation is vastly complicated now. It is complicated by the bootleggers who have become entrenched in this country."

Licensing would not do away with competition among licensed liquor dealers. And competition among them would mean trying to increase consumption. Obviously, that would work against temperance.

Likewise, the difficulties of enforcement would be huge. Likewise, the dangers of political corruption would increase.

Outlines Proposed System.

Outlining his proposed new system, Prof. Dimock said he would suggest the setting up of state liquor authorities in the various states.

"A nonprofit government corporation would be established in the state with a board of directors and with a business manager who would be responsible for its operation along sound business lines," he said.

"This state authority would own and sell the liquor—have complete charge of it excepting for the manufacture. After careful investigation it could license certain places to sell it with meals. But the rest of the sales would be made by the state authority stores—and for consumption off the premises."

"The authority, also, should have the power to establish a permit system, determine who should have liquor and how much. It would be helpful if local advisory committees were set up to advise it on what to do in the different communities and on the permit system."

Way to Rout Bootleggers.

"This plan will establish a state organization strong enough to deal with the bootleggers. The state government would have a plain interest in running them out, for it would be the statekeeper. Moreover, whereas under a license system, a new administration would be needed to handle taxation, the state liquor authority under this plan would itself procure the revenue for the government without the help of a separate body."

The association passed a resolution asking that the remainder of the federal public works appropriation be reserved for local projects. The delegates expressed fear that red tape would delay approval of many such projects until after Jan. 1, the deadline for obtaining "easy money."

BOY'S LETTER TO PRESIDENT LIFTS HOME MORTGAGE

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Adam M. Schmidt, a 12 year old schoolboy, who worried about a $5,400 mortgage on the family home, won't have to "sleep under a tree," as he wrote President Roosevelt he was willing to do.

Foreclosure of mortgages on his parents' home at 118 Dayton street, Trenton, was averted—the first in New Jersey to be averted under the home owners' loan corporation.

Adam, his mother and father, and friends of the family were present today in the office of G. Frank Shanley, state manager, to see the two mortgages canceled and receipts for corporation bonds made out to the mortgagors.

Unknown to the family Adam had addressed a letter to President Roosevelt. "Please, Sir President Roosevelt," he said, "I feel sorry for my mother. Mother cries day and night because we are going to lose our home. The man is going to sell our house on the 30th of August and make an action of our furniture because my father can't pay the mortgage. There are seven in the family, counting me. I'd lose everything what I got. Please can't you do something for our family? I am willing to sleep under a tree, but I feel sorry for my mother and father and sister and the rest of the family. Please help us to do something. Thanks a thousand times."

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Real estate tax collections yesterday were $359,438, making a total of $81,701,720 collected since enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act was started on April 28. The day's collection of real estate taxes and delinquent taxes for the last four years followed:

	1928.	1929.
Oct. 27.....	15,338	36,349
Uncollected..	16,825,628	44,825,666
Nov. 1.....	1,820	1,820
Oct. 27.....	136,399	131,383
Uncollected..	71,184,289	73,034,875

The day's collection of 1931 personal property taxes totaled $45,293.

County Assessor Jacobs yesterday requested number of public officials, business men, and heads of various civic organizations to attend a conference this morning in his office on the assessment situation. He explained that the purpose of the meeting was to review methods of speeding up the billing and collection of taxes.

Among the officials invited were George F. Nixon and Fred W. Brummel of the board of tax appeals, County Judge Jack J. Connelley, Mayor Joseph J. Connelley, County Clerk Switzer, County Treasurer McDonough, President Whealan of the county board, State's Attorney Courtney, and Hayden N. Bell, who is in charge of the state's attorney's tax collection department.

Civic Leaders Also Invited.

Others asked to attend were John O. Rees, director, and Ernest R. Graham, chairman of the executive committee of the committee on public expenditures; D. F. Kelly, Attorney Silas H. Strawn and Henry P. Chandler, Gordon Strong, Sewell L. Avery, George O. Fairweather, Newton C. Farr, chairman of the executive committee of the CRA; William B. Hale, chairman of the committee on taxation of the Chicago Bar Association, and Alfred E. Cowles, president, and Douglas Sutherland, secretary of the Civic Federation and Bureau of Public Efficiency.

Federal Judge Wilkerson yesterday set Nov. 6 for hearing on a motion by Arthur B. Hall, receiver for the Stevens hotel, for instructions concerning the payment of $153,079 in penalties accrued on the hotel's 1929 and 1930 delinquent taxes. Mr. Hall contends that the hotel is entitled to a 50 per cent reduction on the penalties. Exclusive of penalties the hotel owes $713,769 in taxes for the two years.

South Shore Club Pays $20,000.

Attorney John G. Campbell, representing the South Shore Country club, yesterday made a $20,000 payment on the club's 1930 tax bill before Judge Jarecki. The club owes a balance of $20,000 for 1930, but the 1931 taxes have been paid in full.

Judge Jarecki appointed Treasurer McDonough receiver for 46 more income bearing properties yesterday to enable him to collect $94,000 in taxes under the Kerner-Skarda act. Attorneys for other properties paid $70,000 to avoid receiverships.

Asks 15 Millions for Relief in New York Next Month

New York, Oct. 27.—[Special.]—Public Welfare Commissioner Frank J. Taylor today asked the board of estimate to appropriate $15,000,000 for home and work relief for the city's idle for November. ICKES OPPOSES CANAL PURCHASE; FAVORS BRIDGE

Against Advancing Cash to Sanitary District.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., Oct. 27.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Interior Harold I. Ickes, who is engaged in pumping the last of $1 billion 300 million dollars in easy money out of the public treasury, today declared that the condition of government finances should deter congress from spending less than 4 per cent of that amount on purchase of the Chicago sanitary canal.

Ickes, however, gave Mayor Edward J. Kelly, who called on him today, encouragement on the plan to get federal easy money for the outer drive bridge. Mayor Kelly said after seeing Ickes that he had been assured that if the project is hurried through the state public works board, the central administration will pass on it quickly.

Mayor Kelly also said that tomorrow he intends to lay before Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, a proposal to sell to the RFC 40 million dollars' worth of school bonds with which to pay salaries owed to teachers.

Opposes Canal Purchase.

Secretary Ickes threatened indirectly to hurl the weight of the Roosevelt administration into an attempt to block the announced plan of sanitary district officials who have said they will seek to have congress purchase or take a mortgage on the canal. The reason he gave was the condition of the federal finances.

"Can you imagine congress voting 120 million dollars for that canal with government finances the way they are?" he said.

Although he inferred that 120 millions voted by congress out of the treasury would hurt government credit, Ickes reiterated his willingness to draw 120 millions out of the treasury on behalf of his public works administration and spend it on the sewage plant if the sanitary board will step aside and let him dictate the spending.

Easy Money Slipping Away.

Willing to make the advance to the sanitary district on his own terms, Ickes warned the sanitary board today that unless they meet those terms soon all of the easy money may soon be gone. He criticized the plan to have congress buy the canal as wasteful.

"Congress meets in January," Ickes declared. "How soon could such a bill pass? Meanwhile they are losing valuable months of time. By January the legislature will be adjourned; the public works money may be gone. And the knowledge that the money is here for them to get doesn't help their case in the Supreme court when they ask for a continuance."

Ickes' program which he wants the sanitary board to adopt calls for legislation in Illinois permitting the sanitary board to turn its plant over to Ickes' public works administration, allow the administration to complete the sewage plants, and repay the government expenditure by renting the system back.

Sanitary district officials want congress to buy the canal or take a mortgage on it for 120 millions. The board will then use the money to complete the sewage system.

May Turn Down New York.

While he was sticking fast to his position on the Chicago loan, Ickes slapped New York, previously on the favored easy money states, by inferring that he would not grant 10 million dollars which Gov. Herbert Lehman wants for special road work.

6 POLL JUDGES GET JAIL TERMS FOR VOTE FRAUDS

Judge J. G. Van Keuren of Pinckneyville, sitting in the county court, yesterday pronounced jail sentences for contempt of court on six judges of election who worked during the election of Nov. 4, 1930.

All of them were found guilty of making false canvasses of election returns. The frauds were discovered in the recount which resulted in the ouster from congress of Peter J. Granta in favor of Stanley Kins.

John F. Mahagan, 509 West Madison street, judge in the 10th precinct of the 27th ward, got a 60 day sentence. Five others received 30 day sentences. They are Frank Bartoszek, 1055 West Huron street; Fred Jockel, 950 West Erie street, and Steven Dobbela, 1117 West Huron street, judges in the 15th precinct of the 31st ward; Walter T. Joyce, 24 South Green street, judge in the 8th precinct of the 27th ward, and Tony De Leo, 735 South Racine street, judge in the 1st precinct of the 25th ward.

START BUILDING BARGE TERMINAL ABOUT DEC. 1ST

Plans Nearly Complete, Says Engineer.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Except for a few lines from a draftsman's pen, plans are complete for the Chicago barge terminal, and it is proposed to take bids about Nov. 1, award the contract about Nov. 15, and have actual construction started about Dec. 1.

This is the long discussed terminal to be built at the junction of the Chicago river and the sanitary canal, near South Damen avenue. By a settlement of the "50 foot strip" cases in connection with the old Illinois and Michigan canal, the state has acquired a 21-acre site for the terminal. Two railroads, the Santa Fe and the Illinois Central, are to provide $200,000 for the construction work.

Required state legislation was passed by the general assembly last spring in a bill introduced by Representative William W. Powers. The law went into effect on July 13, and since then the state department of public works has been working steadily on the project.

Plans Are Complete.

Robert Kingley, director of that department, replied yesterday to an inquiry concerning progress. He said that little remains to be done before the pile drivers will start to work.

"The plans are practically complete," he said. "The approval of the Chicago regional port commission is expected and we can go ahead."

"We have negotiated with the two railroads and have received favorable replies from them. They have agreed to a method of disbursement, which avoids the necessity of having the money go into the state treasury and out again, a process that might cause delay until an appropriation could be made. The method will be for the railroads to pay out the money in series of payments to the contractor based on certificates of the state that certain work has been done."

"We intend to lease the terminal to a single operator and have canvassed the possible lessees and have taken their structural needs into consideration. So we will be ready, we believe, to put the terminal into operation soon after its completion."

The two most likely bidders for the lease are the Inland Waterways corporation, which is also known as the Federal Barge company, and the North Pier Terminal.

Describe Plans for Docks.

Details of the plans being completed were provided by Walter Smith Jr., district engineer for the public works department, and by C. M. Briggs, terminal engineer. They described the dockage to be constructed on the south side of the canal a short distance east of Damen avenue.

"The terminal," said Engineer Briggs, "will have a capacity of 1,000,000 tons a year. The dock line in the Santa Fe slip will be about 1,000 feet in length. Along the river there will be space for some transferring, and across the slip there is the grain dock sufficient for two or three lake vessels, part of which may be available for barges. Across the river the state has two slips that can be used for empty barges. And along the south bank of the canal the state has an easement that reaches almost from Damen avenue to Western avenue, probably 2,000 feet."

"Three of the larger barges expected to come into use or five of the present size can tie up at the main dock. But the building to be erected for loading and unloading can handle only one at a time. It is to be 270 feet long and 85 feet wide. A single barge is 300 feet long. There will be nine ramps and for storage freight handling there will be eight openings for two of which we propose escalators. Mobile equipment will be provided by the lessee."

"The terminal is designed for rapid transfer operations and not for storage, and its principal purpose is to provide facilities for outbound freight, particularly of the package type, and primarily for the manufacturer whose plant is away from the water front."

EDITH M'CORMICK ESTATE RECEIVES $672,000 IN BONDS

Edward A. Dato, former real estate partner of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, has turned over to her estate $672,000 in bonds which he was holding, and which the estate said to recover, it became known yesterday. The transfer became public when the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee and executor of the estate, dismissed its petition to recover the bonds before Probate Judge John F. O'Connell.

Dato explained last night that he had turned over the bonds, which are on two properties—the Sheridan Aldine building and the Hotel Roosevelt in Chicago. Dato said that on the condition that he was to be consulted on any reorganization plans for the buildings. Dato had held the bonds to secure notes for more than $1,000,000 that he had signed for the Edith Rockefeller McCormick trust, he said. If he is sued on the notes, the executor will defend him and pay the cost of the litigation, Dato said.

INFANT WELFARE SOCIETY WARS ON MALNUTRITION

One of 100 Charities That Must Be Helped.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Crushing a rising tide of malnutrition among preschool children is the chief concern of the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago this coming winter. The welfare society is one of the hundred charity and welfare organizations participating in the community fund for allied Chicago charities. It will be aided in part with contributions from the $4,000,000 fund to be raised in a community fund campaign opening in November.

Thousands of the Infant Welfare Society's small charges in the city's impoverished neighborhoods are children whom the social workers call "borderline" cases. They come from families who never have been compelled to ask for relief and have put it off for pride's sake, until hunger has become a reality.

"Soft bones, anemia, tuberculosis—such poverty diseases as these—are in the offering for our youngsters unless our physicians and nurses, always on guard, succeed in forestalling the effects of malnutrition," Miss Jeannette Townsend, extension secretary, explained yesterday. "Despite a trimmed budget—$156,559 last year against $208,000 in 1931, the peak year—plus the discontinuance of three of our 21 stations, we are throwing our combined forces into an attack on malnutrition, which we know definitely is increasing."

Rise in Malnutrition.

Miss Sara B. Place, R. N., superintendent of the society, pointed to a graph on which a line descended almost at a 45 degree angle from 1910, the year before the society was organized, until 1931. The line bent slightly upward in 1932 and is still on the upgrade this year.

"This line shows the rapid decrease and then the alarming rise of our malnutrition rate," said Miss Place. "Out in the district stations we find such evidence of malnutrition as poor posture and lack of muscle tone, and eyes no longer bright. The physician will pinch the cheeks of the children, looking for pouches of unhealthy fat and trying to see whether the pallor is natural or from ill health."

"We try to learn what kind of food the child has been eating. If the family is still able to buy its own food we advise the mother what to buy. When necessary we refer her to the relief agencies."

"Many of the families have not had to go to a relief agency before, and have lived on inadequate diet because they were too proud to ask for help. We convince the mother that her malnourished child must have certain foods such as cod liver oil, orange and tomato juice, cereal, and milk, and we suggest a schedule for the right kind of meals. In special cases the child is given a special diet from the relief agency. The relief agencies, by the way, are giving an adequate family diet now."

Cod Liver Oil a Food.

"Please say," interrupted Miss Townsend, "that cod liver oil is not a medicine but a food. It is our chief weapon against the effects of malnutrition. When diets began to get scanty and when the relief rations were not yet sufficient, we gave more and more cod liver oil to the children. For instance in 1923, before the depression, our cod liver oil bill was only $1,500. In 1931, it was $13,267, and we distributed 60,000 bottles. With the relief diet improved in 1932, the bill dropped to $7,036.

"Our work isn't entirely preventing malnutrition. Our job is primarily to decrease the death rate of babies, improve their health, and care for the mother. We teach the mother in evening classes about nutrition and cooking, how to take care of the individual child according to its needs, and how to guide their play and what clothing they should wear."

Examine Expectant Mothers.

"The doctors examine the expectant mother and later the child regularly at the welfare station. Nurses follow up the physicians' instructions in the homes to offer further help. On the whole we find the mothers co-operative and thankful for the service. They find they have healthier and happier babies and are themselves in better health under our guidance."

The death rate among the society's infants was 42 per 1,000 in 1911, the first year of its organization. In 1932 it had dropped to eight per 1,000 babies cared for. Although the death rate is still low, there is an increase in the sickness rate particularly among the borderline cases. The following table shows the increased demand made on the fund since 1925, which was a normal year:

Year.	Cases.
1926	16,294
1928	25,280

Philip D. Armour is president of the Infant Welfare Society and Donald B. Douglas, treasurer. The society's budget is raised by voluntary subscription, but in these times is inadequate to meet the increased load.

C. A. C. Indorses Fund.

The executive committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce yesterday announced its indorsement of the community fund. "The agencies to be included in the campaign are among the most important and well known charities of the city," the committee stated. "All of them have been indorsed by the subscriptions investigating committee of the Association of Commerce. All of them are engaged in activities which are of city-wide interest and which may be properly maintained on a city-wide basis. The Chicago Association of Commerce regards this effort as particularly important at this time."

CHICAGO VISITOR DECIDES FRIEND JOE IS SMART

Henry Manaster, partner in the packing concern of Harry Manaster & Brother, 1018 West 37th street, recently invited his friend, Joseph Kurdie of Baltimore, Md., to visit him in Chicago. Mr. Kurdie demurred.

"There is too much racketeering and robbery going on there," he said. "Later he relented and announced that he would come to see the World's Fair. Then, on Saturday, Mr. Kurdie became ill and telegraphed Mr. Manaster that his partner, William Schludberg, would make the trip in his stead. Plans which the Manaster brothers, Harry and Henry, had made to have a detail of policemen accompany the timid Mr. Kurdie were abandoned."

Mr. Schludberg arrived as scheduled yesterday and visited the Manaster packing plant. He was seated with Henry in a private office while Harry and a dozen employees in the main office were cowering on the day's business. In walked six men with guns who compelled all present to lie on the floor. Then they took about $300 of the packing concern's funds.

"I will certainly have to wire Joe and tell him he is a smart fellow," said Mr. Schludberg as he arose from the floor and dusted off his trousers.

BANDITS BATTLE POLICEMAN, SLUG HIM WITH GUNS

Five young bandits last evening fought a gun battle with Policeman Thorsten Olsen of the Hudson avenue station in an attempt to hold up the Oscar Mayer wholesale meat plant at 1241 Sedgwick street. The gunmen fled without any loot after beating the policeman into unconsciousness.

The holdup men drove up to the plant as twenty-five drivers were giving their day's receipts, amounting to $2,500, to Mrs. Catherine Ebert, the cashier. As Mrs. Ebert saw the gunmen approaching she pressed a button which dropped a glass window in front of her office. The youths fired through the window. Policeman Olsen, who was assigned to guard the plant, fled at them.

Seizing a driver, Charles Anderson, 3525 Bortone avenue, and using him as a shield, the bandits exchanged shots with the policeman. When Olsen ran out of ammunition the robbers rushed in and beat him with their gun butts. He was taken to the Alexian Brothers' hospital, where it was said his condition was not serious. The Mayer company has been robbed three times in a little more than a month.

BRITISH PERFECT NEW RADIO BEAM FOR AIR LINERS

(Copyright 1933: By The New York Times.) LONDON, Oct. 27.—A new wireless beam system for guiding cross channel air liners flying blind between London and Paris has been successfully tested at Croydon air field.

A pilot is enabled to reach his destination in fog or bad weather by keeping his aircraft flying down a wireless beam sent out by the radio tower at the airfield. When the pilot is head on his course a thick, white, horizontal line appears on a black background in an instrument in the cockpit. When he is off the course the line separates into two thin white lines, the thicker of which indicates the side on which the course lies.

The new radio beacon is expected to have a range of 100 miles from Croydon. A similar beacon at Le Bourget will throw a wireless beam to a point on the French coast.

DIVORCES ARYAN AND JEWESS FOR RACE DIFFERENCE

Vienna Judge Hands Down Unusual Decision.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Oct. 27.—It took a court in Vienna, which at this writing is still in Austria, to hand down today what is believed to be the first decision that Jews and Aryan cannot get along in wedlock.

Frantz and Cecelia Griesler agreed that they wanted a separation.

"She's a poor housekeeper," said the husband.

"He turned against me because I was Jewish," said the wife, explaining that her husband had renounced Catholicism and she Judaism when they were married by a city magistrate.

Judge Renders Decision.

Judge Hoeberl, a former baron and a lean Austrian aristocrat, solemnly donned a black velvet bonnet and rendered this decision:

"The court is of the opinion that incompatibility in this marriage results from the fact that the parties to it are of different racial origin and grants the divorce on these grounds. Racial differences as great as those between Aryans and Jews must lead to conjugal shipwreck. The two races look at life in entirely different ways. Both parties must be considered to blame for contracting matrimony with full knowledge of this difference."

Dr. Alfred Rosenfeld, acting for the state, was on his feet in a minute. In Austria the state's attorney defends the institution of matrimony.

"Your honor's decision is precipitate because it has not been proved that the two are really of different races," he said. "Who knows but that one of his ancestors might have been a Jew and one of hers a Christian? To say any one is of pure race is nonsense. There have not been any pure races since the Crusades, the Thirty Years' war, and the long practiced medieval custom of 'droit de seigneur'."

Nazi Prisoner's Philosophy.
Another aspect of Nazi philosophy was expounded in another court by the accused, Alfred Frenzl, charged with embezzling funds.

"I would have said it back when I got a job," said Frenzl.

"Did you expect to get a job?" the court asked.

"All us Nazis expect to get jobs soon," he replied.

New activities were reported today by Chancellor Dollfuss' patriotic front against both Nazis and Socialists. Eleven Nazi students, ringleaders of a riot at Vienna university, were sent to a brand new concentration camp at Wolfersdorf to join sixty-one of their comrades. Socialist vendors of secretly published party newspapers were jailed.

The Socialists promptly retaliated, calling street strikes at the gas works and various factories as a rehearsal for a general strike they threaten to precipitate if Dollfuss accedes to the demands of the Fascist leader, Prince Stahremberg, that the Socialist party be dissolved.

The Austrian Yacht club today announced that it had accepted rules of the Associated German club, which means a ban on Jews.

German Princes' Castle Raided.
VIENNA, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Austrian authorities raided a castle in Austria and seized a castle owned by two German princes today. The government banned certain newspapers and illustrated weeklies, including the Berliner Illustrierte, the Muenchener Illustrierte, and Simplicissimus.

The Styrian castle of the Princes Rainer and Ernst Coburg Gotha was entered by gendarmes. They emerged announcing they had made some arrests, confiscated a Nazi uniform and a mimeographing machine, and found a letter which they said might link the noble brothers with the recent attempt to assassinate Chancellor Dollfuss.

The letter, they said, was signed by Kurt Dertli, brother of Rudolph Dertli, who wounded Dollfuss Oct. 4. They described it as asking for financial support, although not stating for what purpose.

Princes Both in Germany.
Both Rainer and Ernst are in Germany, the former by his own volition and the latter because he was deported some time ago. Two of those arrested in the castle raid were alleged to be distant relatives of Chancellor Hitler. The castle's owners are sons of the Archduchess Caroline Marie of Austria, the wife of Prince August Leopold of Coburg Gotha. He himself was born in Rio de Janeiro, the son of the imperial princess of Brazil.

AMERICAN MEDIC CALLS SUNLIGHT CAUSE OF CANCER

MADRID, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Nudism and "other public movements toward exposure of the body" were blamed by Dr. James Ewing of New York today for increasing cancer.

"Sunlight is one of the greatest causes of cancer," said the director of the Memorial hospital, New York, in an address before delegates to the international cancer congress.

"Even trips to the beach often result in skin cancer," he said.

The idea of discovering a cure he called "absurd."

"If there is to be any substantial reduction in the mortality from cancer," he said, "it must be either from prevention or from the discovery of a brand new agent which will control cancer altogether."

"GOLD CABINET" OF FRANCE MAPS BUDGET BATTLE

Premier Plans "Novel" Financial Ideas.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Only a few hours old, Premier Albert Sarraut's ministry of "convalescence" plunged without delay today into the task of balancing the French budget.

Finance Minister Georges Bonnet, "the guardian of the franc," and Abel Gardey, the new budget minister, studied prospects of bringing finances into equilibrium, from the viewpoints of both the senate and the chamber of deputies.

Seek Support of Both.
Gardey, an influential member of the senate, has been speaking and writing on financial restoration for months and is expected to develop plans which will satisfy the senate, while Bonnet will reflect the chamber's attitude.

Sarraut, who early today named a new cabinet to succeed that of Edouard Daladier, wants a fully balanced budget, but insists that the bill must be satisfactory to both houses of parliament.

He took his cue from the ill fortune Daladier's government suffered at the hands of the chamber when it denied him a vote of confidence on a taxation and economy program designed to get France's ledgers balanced.

Go Before Chamber Next Week.
The personnel of the Sarraut ministry is much like that of its predecessor. To the ministers Sarraut brought new, even novel, financial ideas, his advisers said, and a conviction that "almost anything can be done if necessary."

In line with the new premier's announced determination not to "rush things," Sarraut's cabinet will make its first appearance before the chamber on Nov. 3 to ask a vote of confidence for its program.

SIAMESE REBELS IN FLIGHT; REVOLT IS BELIEVED OVER

BANKOK, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Government success in quelling the revolt under way in Siam for several days was believed assured today as the rebels fled toward the northeast frontier before the drive of loyal troops.

The Korat district, the seat of the rebellion, was occupied by government forces.

Prince Bovarade, the rebel commander, and his family escaped by airplane. Many insurgents were killed or wounded. Business and shipping returned to normal here.

RED LEADER PITS HIS WORD AGAINST NAZI'S AT BERLIN ARSON TRIAL

Flyer Seeks Privacy and Gets It.

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—(AP)—The prosecution's attempts to link the former reichstag communist leader, Ernst Torgler, and the still self-confessed firebug, Marinus van der Lubbe, ended today in one man's word against another's.

Stefan Kroyer, leader of the Nazi party at Linz, Austria, told the court that he saw Van der Lubbe on the afternoon of the reichstag fire walking behind Torgler in the corridor of the building. Torgler arose and solemnly asked to be allowed to speak. Permission granted, he said:

"Before Feb. 28 I never saw or talked to Van der Lubbe. That is the absolute, unmitigated truth."

The chief justice turned to Kroyer, who said:

"I stick to my assertion that Van der Lubbe walked behind Torgler through the reichstag corridor."

Repeated clashes between prosecution and defense marked the testimony of other witnesses, who said they saw or were with Torgler on the afternoon of the fire, Feb. 27.

AMERICAN AMONG TEN SEIZED AS SPIES FOR RUSSIA

HELSINKI, Finland, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Arvid Jacobson, described as an American citizen of Finnish origin, was among ten persons arrested here today in connection with alleged espionage activity.

The group is accused of cooperating with a Finnish staff lieutenant believed by authorities to have fled to Russia with Finnish military information.

Jacobson is alleged to have formed connections with Russian secret police while in the United States. He and his young wife are well known here in student circles.

A woman, Mary Martin, reported to be a Briton but carrying a Canadian passport, also was arrested. The arrest followed a raid on Miss Martin's apartment while she was entertaining a party including several prominent Finnish society figures.

'I'VE BEEN HERE BEFORE' LINDY'S WORD TO PARIS

Flyer Seeks Privacy and Gets It.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—There is a new Lindbergh legend in Paris tonight. A French newspaper man started it this morning when he called at the Hotel Crillon, where the aviator and his wife had taken refuge after a secret flight from Inverness, Scotland, to Mureaux, 25 miles from Paris, yesterday.

This newspaper man says he had the good luck of being able to shake hands with Col. Lindbergh as the latter was waiting for an auto to whisk him away. He says he asked him if he liked Paris very much.

"Yes, it's very nice," he replied. "I've been here before."

Whether Lindbergh said it or not, it gives a vivid picture of the emotional processes of the Lone Eagle on the dramatic occasion of his revisiting the place where six years ago he made himself immortal.

The only crowds besieging the Hotel Crillon today were crowds of newspaper men. The rest of Paris took the Lindberghs as coolly as the Lindberghs took Paris.

Col. Lindbergh and his wife landed near the Seine at 5:35 p. m. yesterday, motored to Paris, registered at the hotel, and had dinner with several friends, including Edouard Coste, the aviator, at an inexpensive restaurant near Porte des Ternes. The Lindberghs retired at 9 o'clock.

Stalls Down Stairway.

It was about 10:30 o'clock this morning when the besieging army of newspaper men saw Lindbergh stall down the servants' stairs and dive through the grillwork into the street. There was a moment's delay while a car was pulling up, and it was then that the French newspaper man got the classic line previously cited.

At 1:30 p. m. Lindbergh returned to the Crillon. He had been out to Mureaux to look over his plane. He went up to his room and came down the back stairs accompanied by two lackeys and sat down alone in the quietest corner of the dining room. His wife had slipped a little earlier to have lunch with Mrs. Nelson.

Dean Jay, wife of the Paris manager of the Morgan bank.

After lunch Lindbergh returned to his room and a little while later his wife joined him. At 3 o'clock they walked across the street to the new American embassy building. Newspapermen had been invited for a "press conference." But the embassy press attaché had warned them that the colonel would not say anything and they must not annoy him by asking questions. Lindbergh strolled about the offices. Ernest Hemingway, the author, saw him and told the aviator he ought to go to Spain and see a bull fight.

In a few minutes the Lindberghs came out into the waiting room where the press was assembled.

"Col. Lindbergh has nothing to say to you, but he will be very glad to shake hands with you," S. Pinckney Tuck, press attaché, announced.

The colonel lived up to his word. Tonight the Lindberghs were the guests of Aviator Coste. A select company of aviators, including Maurice Bellonte, Rene Lefevre, and Jean Assolant, participated in a transatlantic dinner. Premier Albert Sarraut was present.

There were no official visits, no laying of wreaths, no ceremonies—and no public bow. He is familiar to all these gewgaws—he has been here before.

GERMANY BOLTS WORLD COURT IN ISOLATION DRIVE

Withdraws Two Suits Against Poland.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
BERLIN, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Withdrawing two suits started in the world court at The Hague, Germany today continued her exit from international bodies. Diplomatic circles forecast Germany's resignation from the world court as a result of today's action. They consider this new step toward "absolute self-sufficiency of Germany," one of the aims of the Nazi leaders.

The two German cases pending at The Hague are directed against Poland. Berlin charged that Poland violated the rights of German minorities, especially through its "agrarian reform" confiscating the estates of Germans. German officials stress that withdrawal from the world court does not mean that Germany believes it is impossible to reach a peaceable and friendly agreement with Poland.

Urges Direct Negotiations.
"On the contrary, we are convinced that direct negotiations between Germany and Poland will prove more satisfactory than dealing with the help of the heavy machinery of the world court," said a spokesman.

The Poles in their usual charming and suave manner assured the Germans that their viewpoint is quite correct, and that neighboring talks would prove more satisfactory than the discussions of arbitrators from far flung regions of the world.

Excitement prevailed in diplomatic circles today, especially at the British embassy, which is still without a formal reply from the foreign office to a note concerning the arrest at Munich of Noel D. Panter, British newspaperman. The British consul general, D. Gainer, was allowed to interview Panter today in the presence of a Nazi witness.

Charged with Treason.
Panter is formally charged with high treason for "accumulating information on storm troopers and Hitler guards and using it to convey the impression that they are military bodies violating the Versailles treaty." This means a trial by the Leipzig supreme court on the strength of paragraph 92 of the penal code which implies heavy sentences.

Gainer found Panter pale from confinement, but otherwise in good health. He was permitted to give him some money. Panter attempted to give the consul general a check, but the checkbook was seized.

Panter's reply to the charges is that he sent ordinary newspaper messages and was not responsible for the make-up and headline given them by the newspaper.

The German press has not reported the arrest of the British newspaperman.

Praises Nazi Finance Policy.
BERLIN, Oct. 27.—(AP)—The president of the Reichsbank quoted figures today which, he said, seem "to show a Nazi or Fascist regime is able to handle currency policies less inflationarily than a democratic rule."

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, the president, spoke at a general shareholders' meeting particularly about a bank law reform program to "stimulate the judicious handling of capital," to increase the market, and to give unemployment a death blow.

"At the present time," Dr. Schacht maintained, "when the whole world is raising the cry that Germany is drifting to inflation, statistical figures show a Nazi or Fascist regime is able to handle currency policies less inflationarily than a democratic rule."

"Business under the Nazi regime is showing an unmistakable revival which is organic and not artificial."

Hitler-Hugenberg Feud Ends.
Chancellor Adolf Hitler and Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, former minister of agriculture and economics and Nationalist leader, have patched up their differences, with the latter reappearing on the political scene as tenth on Hitler's list of Reichstag nominees in the Nov. 12 plebiscite and election.

The chancellor and Dr. Hugenberg have repeatedly visited each other and Hitler even has been reported to have written Hugenberg that he soon hoped to see him back "in important work for the state."

The others on the chancellor's list, in order, are: Rudolf Hess, Nazi leader; William Frick, minister of the interior; Hermann Goering, minister without portfolio; Dr. Joseph Goebbels, minister of public enlightenment and propaganda; Ernst Roehm, storm troop leader; Walter Darre, food minister; Franz Seidler, steel helmet leader and the minister of labor, and Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen.

ARREST FORMER WEST POINT GRID
STAR AS RAPIST

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 27.—(Special.)—Lieut. John Murrell, former all-American football star at West Point, was in jail tonight on a federal complaint alleging a capital offense. Murrell is alleged to have raped Miss Blanche Ralls at Fort Sam Houston Oct. 22. He pleaded not guilty before United States Commissioner Paul Lockhart, who set the hearing for Wednesday.

Murrell, 27, is attached to the Ninth Infantry and lives with his parents and sister. He formerly was married, but is divorced.

Little information was available about Miss Ralls, and the department of justice agent, Charles Davis, who filed the complaint, refused to discuss it. Murrell was arrested at his quarters by a United States marshal.

MUSSOLINI SEES ENTIRE WORLD GOING FASCIST

Says the Movement Is Spreading.

ROME—Oct. 27.—(AP)—Fascism is "the hope of the world," Premier Mussolini says in a message to the Black Shirts which is to be read in every town in Italy tomorrow on the eleventh anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome.

The message reads:
"The eleventh year of the régime closes with an imposing balance of works and events."

"You have seen them day by day. One of them is the decennial aerial cruise which has been the exaltation of the revolution in the skies. Twice our airmen flew across the ocean and demonstrated of what stuff is this new fascist generation."

Movement Spreading Over World.
"The world of doctrines, against which Fascism rose, is retreating and capitulating everywhere. In Italy it is now far away and squelched even in memory."

"The Italian people are pressing ever closer around the ideas and realities of the revolution and face with abnegation and discipline the hardships of the present."

"The levies of youth, strong in spirit and muscles, rise up without uncertainty in their hearts and are ready for a call to whatsoever sacrifice."

"We march into the twelfth year of Fascism with full fervor and enthusiasm of the proposition more decisive than ever."

"Without aberrations or involutions, we go ahead, step by step, according to Roman custom, and give the world an example never before seen in its history of a constructive revolution which continues, develops, and evolves as a daily creation of the spirit and will of the people."

"Step by Step We Go Ahead."
"Even at the beginning of the twelfth year, the revolution will make a step forward, creating new labor, disciplining the economic forces, and making them adequate to the necessities of the nation."

"Without aberrations or involutions, we go ahead, step by step, according to Roman custom, and give the world an example never before seen in its history of a constructive revolution which continues, develops, and evolves as a daily creation of the spirit and will of the people."

SANITY HEARING ASKED FOR LAKE FOREST WOMAN

A petition for a sanity hearing and the appointment of a conservator for Mrs. Emma Fitz Hugh Packard, 360 North Mayflower road, Lake Forest, was filed yesterday in the Lake County court at Waukegan by State's Attorney Charles E. Mason.

He acted at the request of Attorney Marvin A. Jersild of Chicago, representing Mrs. Packard's family. Attorney Jersild said that the action was necessary in order to settle the estate of Mrs. Packard's father, Carter Harrison Fitz Hugh, investment broker, who died last November.

Because Mrs. Packard is an invalid, County Judge Perry L. Persons set the hearing in her home, at noon on Tuesday. Witnesses listed in the petition were Mrs. Isabelle Scriber Fitz Hugh, Mrs. Packard's mother, her brother, Scriber, and Dr. Clifford P. McCullough of Lake Forest, the family physician.

Mrs. Packard made her debut in 1916, and in 1920 was married to Frank Packard. They were divorced six years ago.

U. S. WARRANT ISSUED FOR NAZI LEADER IN N. Y.

Accused of Being Bogus
Diplomatic Agent.

New York, Oct. 27.—[Special.]—A federal warrant for the arrest of Heinz Spanknoebel was issued here today on the ground that he was acting, or purporting to act, as an agent of the German government in the United States without notifying the state department.

The complaint was sworn to by United States Attorney George Z. Medalle on learning from the United States state department that Mr. Spanknoebel was not registered as a diplomatic or consular agent of the German government.

Based on Statute of 1917.
The warrant, issued by United States Commissioner Francis J. O'Neill, alleges the operations of Mr. Spanknoebel were in violation of section 2331 of the Foreign Relations Sections of the United States code, passed in 1917 after the revelations of the activities of German propagandists procuring the entry of the United States into the war.

Medalle explained that this warrant has no legal connection with the operations of Mr. Spanknoebel in seizing the leadership of the United States societies during the month in a series of swift maneuvers which raised the anti-Semitic issue in such intensity that Mayor John P. O'Brien prohibited the holding of the annual German day of the United States societies on the ground that disorder was likely to result.

The warrant, Mr. Medalle said, is based on the testimony of Victor and Bernard Ridder, that Mr. Spanknoebel called on them here early in July after his last visit to Germany and showed them credentials giving him authority from the Press Bureau of the Berlin foreign office, to discuss the editorial policy of Ridder's Staats Zeitung, published for the German population of New York and the vicinity.

Bernard Ridder said Spanknoebel laid before him and his brother, Victor, a collection of clippings from the Ridder papers and said they should stop publishing such Jewish propaganda against the Nazi cause.

Ridder Brothers Chase Him.
The Ridder brothers ordered him out; attempted to overthrow him at the last turbulent meeting of the United German societies last Monday night and were themselves suspended.

In the debate at this meeting Mr. Spanknoebel admitted he had called on the Ridder brothers with such authority and defended it on the ground that it was the duty of all loyal Germans to get behind the new Germany of Hitler, leaving out the Jews, who, he said in the same discussion, had no place in a unified Germany.

On seeing the published record, Mr. Medalle took a hand in the situation and called the Ridder brothers. Although Mr. Spanknoebel has since been disavowed officially by the German diplomatic and consular service here and abroad, Mr. Medalle says that is immaterial. The accusation rests on the allegation that he represented himself as being an agent of the German government when he was not.

Faces Fine and 5 Year Term.
The failure to register is classed in the federal code as a felony, punishable by a fine up to $5,000 and imprisonment up to five years.

Mr. Spanknoebel's associates admitted they knew he had called for Berlin World on the Deutschland line of the Hamburg-American line, although the captain of the Deutschland replied to a radio inquiry: "Heinz Spanknoebel not aboard."

"He will be back on Nov. 16," said Dr. Ignaz T. Griebel, president of the League of Friends of New Germany, which Mr. Spanknoebel organized for the declared purpose of putting Germans in America behind the new Germany.

Meanwhile, Dr. Griebel made no secret of his intention to cause Mayor O'Brien to retract at the polls his prohibition of the German day celebration in deference to the Jewish opposition. "He hoped to gain the Jewish vote," said Dr. Griebel, "but it will cost him the German vote."

According to the records of the war department, Dr. Griebel served four years with the German army as a first lieutenant during the war, became a naturalized American citizen and a doctor in this country and passed the required examinations for the Medical Reserve corps of the United States army, in which he now is a first lieutenant.

THE TRIBUNE'S PLATFORM FOR CHICAGO

1. Cut taxes in half.
2. Pay the defaulted bonds.
3. Overcome crime.
4. Speed up railroad passenger service.
5. Make Chicago the first city in the world.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

A GREAT PUBLIC WORK.

The Chicago Motor club shows again its practical initiative in the interest of motorists by calling a mass meeting of public officials to urge the prompt construction of a system of elevated main highways for Chicago and the metropolitan district. President Hayes of the club puts the gist of the strong case for this project when he says that "a federal loan would put thousands of men to work this winter" and that interest and principal could be paid from the state gasoline excise without burdening the public with any new or additional tax.

The suggestion of a federal loan comes from Mr. Lester Norris of St. Charles, president of the enterprising Fox River Valley association, who makes some very sound and important comment on the project. "The entire metropolitan area," says Mr. Norris, "in fact, all northern Illinois, northern Indiana, and southeastern Wisconsin, would benefit from this employment relief project in Chicago, as well as from the improvement in motor transportation facilities within the city. The gasoline tax offers perfect security for the government money, which cannot be said about all of its industrial recovery loans. The improvement is economically sound, disregarding its value as an unemployment relief measure, which cannot be said of reclamation work to increase the farm surplus."

"Washington is loaning money to railroads to buy rails as an aid to the steel industry. The elevated highways likewise would require steel. Surely automobile transportation, paying 1 cent a gallon to the government on fuel consumed, is entitled to as much consideration as rail transportation."

Administrator of Public Works Ickes has recently reminded us that the huge fund in his charge is for the primary purpose of relieving unemployment, and this is one of the strong claims to be made for this loan. We are fortunate in having a program thoroughly studied and representing the expert conclusions of Dr. Miller McClintock, head of the Harvard traffic research department, who upon the initiative of Aid. Marsden, chairman of the council committee on streets and safety, was employed two years ago to make a scientific survey and recommendation. With this authoritative plan and other material available, the highway project can be got under way as soon as finances are provided, with prompt employment and the added satisfaction to Mr. Ickes as a conscientious guardian of this fund that repayment is assured and that the federal aid will serve an honest and thoroughly considered public project of first rate benefit to a great work. We do not believe any project of public works which will come before the works administrator can have more solid merit than this.

GEN. JOHNSON AND MR. WALLACE.

Gen. Johnson says the farmers should not blame him for what they do not like in the working out of the various recovery acts. His business is industry and not farming. He is in charge of the NRA, not the AAA. Mr. Wallace and Mr. Peek have the latter. The general's job is to get industry and trade back on their feet by the lift of codes dealing with employment, prices, wages, and practices.

Mr. Wallace and Mr. Peek, although charged with failure by farmers in western states, cannot be accused of indifference. They have not been lackadaisical. They have not been faint-hearted or unresourceful. They have put their minds to their work. Arthur Evans of THE TRIBUNE in Alabama, for instance, finds that the cotton farmers have been paid $30,000,000 for plowing up part of their crop and expect to get $30,000,000 from the AAA on their unsold bales at ten cents a pound. They ask that the price be raised to fifteen cents.

Mr. Wallace writes checks as well as regulations. He buys little pigs, wheat, cotton, and other products to get them off the market. Mr. Hopkins of the federal relief administration also is buying farm produce for the needy. Money has been made available for seed, feed, and mortgages. Mr. Wallace begins at the beginning and does not stop at the finish. He is ready to find something beyond it or to start all over again. Gen. Johnson seems to resent the imputation that he is the farmer's chief devil because he has raised the price of canned tomatoes, beans, and fruit, if he has. He has troubles of his own in his own field.

The farm producers might do well to think twice before they reject Mr. Wallace for the general. When the general is in action he tells them; he does not pay them. If his methods were carried into the wheat and cotton fields the order would be to cut the acreage or suffer loss of license, a fine, and possibly jail. Mr. Wallace reaches for his check book. Whatever may be the defects of the farm relief schemes, the farmer has not been asked to pay their expenses or to increase his costs. He has not been put under compulsion. Mr. Wallace tempts him toward what the AAA considers his own good. It may not be good, but Mr. Wallace at least tries to make it a golden road. He does not bank his desk and raise his voice. He draws on the treasury and is patient. Whatever a subsidy, panacea will get a prescription. If Mr. Wallace could make it every day would be Christmas on the farm.

REDUCED COSTS IN RELIEF.

Complaint was made in the legislature when the relief bonds were under discussion that Chicago increases the costs of relief administration although names are being removed from the lists. The explanation has been that needs and costs are increasing, but Robert J. Dunham, chairman of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, says the costs must be cut. The state organization is now distributing five and a half million dollars a month. The best business management and the strictest economies are required if the necessary relief is to be kept going. This will be simple justice to the people dependent upon the supplies and aid furnished by the commission. It has been a long pull not only for the dependents but for the resources upon which they must rely. Several times it has seemed as if exhaustion would break the relief system down. That cannot be permitted. Mr. Dunham realizes that the best claim for continued support of the relief is an unchallengeable administration of it. When it has been put above suspicion or question the money must be found for it. There has been a disposition to regard the sources of relief as inexhaustible in spite of the fact that difficulties increase as the need goes on.

Communities in America never have suffered such a strain before. The emergency has become a matter of years. Two efforts must be made together, one to exercise every possible precaution against abuse and waste and the other to get the money.

THE PRISONERS OF MALLORCA.

The five Americans in Mallorca, in whose midst a Spanish civil guard somehow got his face scratched, have been acquitted by the judges of a military court. The prosecutor asked that the court sentence them to six years in prison, but the judges were apparently considerate of the fact that the accused already had six weeks of disagreeable confinement in a medieval dungeon. They were also probably considerate of the fact that America had been adversely affected by the high handed treatment of five citizens whose offense, whatever it precisely was, could have been nothing more than a misdemeanor.

Even conceding that a Spanish guard under his three corned hat carries the dignity and grandeur of Spain, the unprovoked bumps and minor lacerations which he may have experienced did not indicate the commission of a felony of great moral turpitude. For the good relations of Spain and the United States it is fortunate that the military court did not decide to imprison the Americans on long term sentences. These people had suffered enough before the American state department became aware of the fact that they were suffering unduly for a triviality. One of them being a woman, the indignity and the punishment were less tolerable. Nothing helped their case more than the Paris edition of THE TRIBUNE when they seemed to be forgotten.

The Spanish government was very slow in bringing the Mallorcan authorities to realize that preposterous punishments could not be used to satisfy native pride and save the countenance of the much glorified civil guard. Although the diplomatic steps were slowly taken and under a good deal of newspaper prodding, the state department finally asserted itself and American citizens were rescued not only from prison, and a mighty disagreeable one, but from the feeling that their own government was indifferent to outrages which they might suffer abroad.

Editorial of the Day

A WARNING.

[Charleston, W. Va., Mail.]

The President and the administration at Washington are being warned in time. With all respect for their high office, we suggest to them the wisdom of heeding. The warning is this: The newspaper publishers of the United States will refuse to accept and will defy the imposition of any code of fair competition, or of any other instrumentality or means under whatever name, which would abridge or seek to abridge the freedom of the press.

The code submitted by the nationally associated publishers to the NRA administration, and under which all the newspapers are now operating, is a reasonable code. It is similar to other codes which have been ratified by the President. It contains but two reservations. One of these, as applied to a business other than that of publishing, has already been accepted. That was in the case of the automotive industry. It is that employers shall be free to deal with their employees without the intervention of a third party.

The other reservation is one which applies exclusively to the business of newspaper and periodical publication. It is that, in submitting this code, the publishers "do not" waive any constitutional rights or consent to the imposition of any requirements that might restrict or interfere with the constitutional guaranty of the freedom of the press."

These reservations in the code as submitted by the publishers—the code under which, we repeat, they are now "temporarily" operating—have been flatly refused by the NRA administration. But the last named, at least—the reservation regarding constitutional freedom of the press—will be insisted upon. It will never be surrendered while this constitutional democracy endures. This is a warning.

It is the duty of the newspaper publishers, not so much to themselves as to the public, to guard jealously the national bulwark of free speech and a free press. They will discharge this duty without fear. Codes or no codes, this newspaper will do likewise. We want no Hitlerism in this country.

NRA Administrator Johnson seeks even now to censor the news of NRA doings in Washington, while the President announces that fine or imprisonment, or both, await code-violators.

But where there is no code there can be no violation.

QUICK COMEBACK.

"May I ask how old you are?" said the vacationist to the old villager.

"I'm just a hundred."

"Really? Well, I doubt if you'll see another hundred."

"Well, I don't know so much about that. I'm stronger now than when I started on the first hundred."—Ohio Motorist.

BEFORE AND AFTER.

A very thin man met a very fat one in the hotel corridor. "From the look of you," said the latter, "there might have been a famine."

"Yes," was the reply, "and from the look of you, you might have caused it."—Yale Bowl.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

ILLINOIS is going to be asked to pass a law forbidding the placing of guns in the hands of gangsters. Looking back on how effectively the 18th amendment and the Volstead law kept people from making, selling, or transporting liquor and a great many other laws that didn't seem to be obeyed very strictly, if at all, the only way to keep guns from the hands of gangsters is to wait until a new race of gangsters is born—a kind that has no hands.

"WHAT SHOULD I Put My Money Into?"—Headlines. Well, the old sock, of course, would seem the obvious answer. But then the government might jail you for hoarding, and then there's always the bandits. Those boys can find anything. Personally, I put my money in beefsteak (T bone preferred), gasoline for the family bus, eggs, spare ribs, pork chops, corned beef and cabbage, and now and then a necktie or a pair of pants. When I invest in those things I know my money is reasonably safe.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO LOVE?

What does it mean to love? Is it forsaking That part of you so secretly confined, That place so slow and painful in the making Where you could flee and leave all else behind? Is it to lose what you have guarded long, That separate being, standing straight and tall, And to become less definite, less strong, A stranger who is not yourself at all? Or does it mean to find new growth instead, And in your lover's arms a world so vast That every hunger you have known is fed And every hour fuller than the last? What does it mean to love? To die in giving Or to discover you are really living?

FERRY ADAMS.

EVERY NIGHT I READ for hours the history and various accounts of the civil war. It is a great relief after scanning the items in the newspapers of automobile fatalities. And in the civil war there were often days and even weeks when nobody was killed.

IT WAS A VERY GREAT ERROR in our new handbook for training people to speak the English language correctly to omit the word which in the American language is spelled and pronounced "detective." Viz.: The detective grabbed the gun and slammed him down. In the English language the word is "detective," the extra "a" being put in to after the word arrived in our country. It is really quite unnecessary and, as it seems to do no particular good, it is suggested that we return to the English custom of spelling and pronouncing it. (Voice of Office Boy—"I seen a detective pinch a guy this mornin'." What's the use?)

No! Don't Say IH That's a Fighting Word These Days!

Sub: Down heah in Mississippi, sub, theah is a considerable amount of speculation as to how the 1933 Linebook is going to look under NRA. Go ahead and raise the price, we don't call—uh—we will buy more than evah this yeh. Anyway, fo' the price of cotton is highah. We don't anticipate much change in the covah, except we suppose that you will place yo' blue eagle on top of the Tribune towah. If you do, sub, we hope that it will show mo' gratitude than the Board of Trade pigeons. As fo' the sixty-to' dam pages, we are all laughing ourselves sick at yo' predicament. We figuh that undah the code you must cut down on the size of them, yet put on mo' contributahs. Ha! Ha! Don't you chisel, now, don't you chisel!

HOMER BREWER.

THE MOST TALKED ABOUT POEM in Gertrude Stein's new book, "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas," is "Before the Flowers of Friendship Faded Friendship Faded." Pardon me, Gertrude, but do you stagger?

NO! NO! AND INDEED, NO! That is, not yet! It's chilly and all that and there's been a big snow in northern New York. However, there may yet be sweet, balmy afternoons when you will walk around kicking your feet in the fallen yellow leaves and so—wait! Don't put 'em on yet! You'll be so hot that you won't take any joy in kicking the yellow leaves about. Wait! We'll let you know when the time comes.

AND THESE UNITED STATES haven't decided yet whether hard lickers can be consumed on the premises or must be taken home. I don't care particularly where I consume it, at the likker store or in the privacy of my boudoir. All I want to be sure of is that the likker I buy will not taste of hair oil and benzine. During the bootleg era I got absolutely to loathe the taste of hair oil and benzine.

THERE'S ONE IN EVERY BACK YARD

Her voice brings forth in knotted words
The loose strands of her mind,
Through lips that slide as if to taste
A puckering lemon rind.
Her logic lumps like table salt
One buys in Tipperary;
Her conversation is as bright
As any dictionary.
But, oh! her ears . . . And, oh! her eyes . . .
For listening and for watching!
She wears thumb-mittens on her hands
To save her nails for scratching.
"Please stay a while," she will invite,
"And tell me all about it!"
But if you claim that grass is green,
She'll reprimand: "I doubt it!"

ROSA ZAGNONI MARINONI.

WE HAD A WAR to end war. France is now talking of a war to prevent war. After which there can be a war to destroy war and a war to eradicate war. And there'll be plenty of soldiers for these wars. Was it not good Mr. Barnum who said there is a sucker born every minute?

How to Keep Well
By Dr. W. A. Evans

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual disease.

[Copyright, 1933, By The Chicago Tribune.]

THAT SHOULDER PAIN. PAIN in the shoulder, with pain radiating down the arm, is one of the most frequent disorders. In many cases it is due to a strain in the fingers is added to this symptom. In the old days it was customary to use this combination of disagreeable sensations with the name neuralgia of the shoulder. As we grew more learned we abandoned the use of the word neuralgia, to the old-fashioned folks and in our parlance neuralgia was the word employed. Probably the latter term was no better than the former and in any event it called attention to an effect rather than a cause. It has been suggested that the term be changed to bursitis.

The shoulder is a very important joint. It has much work to do. Not infrequently it is subjected to great strain. It has a far greater range of motion than is the case with the hip joint, the corresponding joint in the leg, and in certain emergencies the greatest strain falls on the joint when the bones are in unusual positions. Important blood and lymph vessels, nerves, ligaments, and tendons are closely packed together as they run over hard, bony surfaces. Even if the bones are in normal position, the tendons and ligaments are anchored to bones—a necessary but not an ideal arrangement. In order to protect these tendons and ligaments where they glide over bone, bony surfaces, called bursa, are provided. There are several of these around the shoulder.

One of the duties of a bursa is to take the blows that life brings, suffering themselves that the bones and their coverings, the joints and the tendons and ligaments may escape. In consequence of their vulnerability, including their location, bursitis of the shoulder region as the result of trauma is very frequent.

In the 1922 census of physical disability Dr. M. Weismann gave it as his opinion that much the greater part of the shoulder trouble encountered in practice was bursitis. The pain down the arm and the numbness and tingling in the fingers, resulting from pressure of the enlarged bursa on the nerves.

Dr. Weismann divided responsibility for bursitis of the shoulder and resultant pains in the arms between trauma and infections occurring in the joints, teeth, sinuses, and elsewhere. Dr. Titus did not agree with him in that, claiming that most cases of bursitis and maybe all were the result of trauma or physical injury. These two physicians also disagreed as to the means of direct treatment of the inflamed bursa. Dr. Weismann painted the skin of the bursa region with tincture of iodine and immediately applied galvanic electrodes, the object being to destroy the inflamed bursa by ionization. Diathermy was used. Dr. Titus did not think iodine could be ionized into a bursa by the method proposed. He advocated another way, applying electricity and other physical therapy locally applied is the proper treatment.

When there are pains in the arms of the kind commonly known as neuritis or neuralgia of the shoulder region should be examined. Heat, light, electricity, and other physical therapy applied there will help more than if given in the arm and hand.

THEY DO NOT CHANGE. A Disputing Family writes: Will you help settle an argument about birthmarks?

1. If a pregnant woman looks at beautiful pictures, statues, etc., during the period of pregnancy, could this in itself make her child beautiful?

2. If a pregnant woman sees some horrible object which affects her, will it be possible for the child to be marked in any way by this occurrence?

3. Is it not true that the child, once having started its growth from the fertilized ovum, will not change or deviate from the pattern determined by the cell's chromosomes except by direct accident to its tissue.

I should like to have you put an end to old wives' tales about children who, because of something that happened to the mothers during pregnancy, looked and grunted like pigs, were marked with mice and snakes, or, on the other hand, turned out to be great geniuses.

REPLY: I have been writing and speaking on this subject for thirty years. At the present time no one with any claim to authority has ever been able to show that there are "disputing families" prove that the facts have not been stated often enough.

LOCAL RULES IN FORCE. Mrs. E. T. writes: Recently I drove to Springfield to visit the Lincoln tomb, played my child with me. We stopped at a drug store in a small town to get something to drink. We were waited on by the proprietor. He rinsed the glasses in a tub of dirty water and set them in a rinsing where a feeble spray of water played on them. Then he set them on a rack to drain and dry. My child wanted a second glass, but I would not let her have it after I saw the dirty glass washing performance.

I told the proprietor that no housewife would wash glasses in such a way; that he might be spreading epidemic encephalitis. He said he had been washing glasses that way for twenty-five years and that nobody had ever caught anything from using these glasses, nor had there been any complaint. As we left the store my child overheard him say, "Nuts."

REPLY: Regulation of places where food and drink are served is generally in the hands of the local government, although the state tries also to exercise some control.

The druggist could not know whether any disease had ever been spread by his glasses. He may have heard complaints but had forgotten them.

"COFFEE HEART." M. M. A. G. writes: Is there such a disease as coffee heart?

REPLY: Not exactly. In nervous or irritable heart it is claimed that the symptoms are made worse by drinking coffee to excess.

BROKEN LIGHT POST. Chicago, Oct. 24.—[Friend of the People.]—Please see what can be done about the electric light post in front of our place. It was knocked down by an automobile about two months ago, leaving the light wires exposed and a danger to children in the neighborhood. H. H.

The post has not been replaced for the reason that we have not had any of this type of post in stock for some time. The broken post was removed and cables buried, thus eliminating danger to children and adults. A new post will be installed as soon as a supply is received from the contractor, W. A. JACKSON, Commissioner of Gas and Electricity.

TITLE TO PROPERTY. Chicago, Oct. 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I, a owner B an amount of money. B owes C a larger amount. B's estate has gone into court for settlement. C wishes to have part of his credit applied to A's indebtedness. Can that be done? J. E. L.

REPLY: The facts stated would understand that C could collect his money and give part of it to A, who could then use it in paying his debt. No reason appears for objecting to accomplishing the same result without a physical transfer of the money. If there is a reason for objection, please state it. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PAYMENT OF DEBT. Metamora, Ill., Oct. 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A owes B an amount of money. B owes C a larger amount. B's estate has gone into court for settlement. C wishes to have part of his credit applied to A's indebtedness. Can that be done? J. E. L.

REPLY: The facts stated would understand that C could collect his money and give part of it to A, who could then use it in paying his debt. PAUPER AFFIDAVIT. Blue Island, Ill., Oct. 25.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I. How may a pauper's plea be filed in (3) case of a divorce, and (2) in what court may the filing be done? A. A. C.

REPLY: 1. Costs can be released by any court on filing a pauper affidavit. You can take this up with the clerk of the court.

2. For such a case it probably will be necessary for you to employ an attorney and he will be in a position to prepare the affidavit for you.

3. Divorce cases are heard in the Circuit and Superior courts.

Q.—Where may I obtain a copy of the code for the retail trade?

A.—Copies of the code for the retail trade may be obtained at the Chicago Association of Commerce offices, North La Salle street, for 10 cents a copy.

Q.—Is it true that stores which employ five people or less are exempted from the code for the retail trade?

A.—This impression, which seems rather general, is not entirely correct. The only retail stores exempted are those employing five people or less in a community having a population of less than 2,500. This, of course, does not exempt any stores in Chicago.

Q.—Where a restaurant is operating under the Blue Eagle, may the employer charge the employees for meals?

A.—The employer may deduct the cost of meals supplied the employee, the charge not to be over 25 cents per meal or more than $3 per week.

Q.—Does the retail code cover the drug trade as well as the dry goods, department store, and other retail businesses?

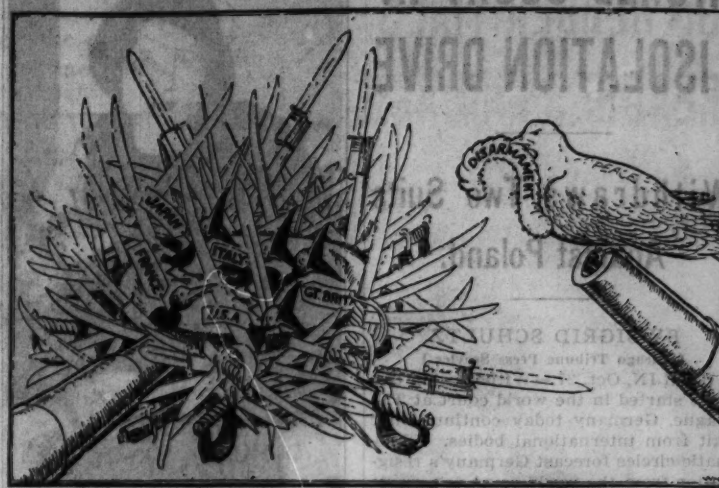

A.—The retail drug store is included under the retailers' permanent code.

Q.—Do employees in banks come under the NRA?

A.—Employees in banks are covered under the bankers' code which was approved by the President on Oct. 4.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—[Editors deary the movement which will violate the first amendment of the federal constitution, which says: "Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press." You say: "No man has ever had a greater duty imposed upon them than has come to the newspaper men of America today, to protect that freedom, not in their own interests but in the interest of all the people, and for all time."

REPLY: I have been writing and speaking on this subject for thirty years. At the present time no one with any claim to authority has ever been able to show that there are "disputing families" prove that the facts have not been stated often enough.

LOCAL RULES IN FORCE. Mrs. E. T. writes: Recently I drove to Springfield to visit the Lincoln tomb, played my child with me. We stopped at a drug store in a small town to get something to drink. We were waited on by the proprietor. He rinsed the glasses in a tub of dirty water and set them in a rinsing where a feeble spray of water played on them. Then he set them on a rack to drain and dry. My child wanted a second glass, but I would not let her have it after I saw the dirty glass washing performance.

I told the proprietor that no housewife would wash glasses in such a way; that he might be spreading epidemic encephalitis. He said he had been washing glasses that way for twenty-five years and that nobody had ever caught anything from using these glasses, nor had there been any complaint. As we left the store my child overheard him say, "Nuts."

REPLY: Regulation of places where food and drink are served is generally in the hands of the local government, although the state tries also to exercise some control.

The druggist could not know whether any disease had ever been spread by his glasses. He may have heard complaints but had forgotten them.

"COFFEE HEART." M. M. A. G. writes: Is there such a disease as coffee heart?

REPLY: Not exactly. In nervous or irritable heart it is claimed that the symptoms are made worse by drinking coffee to excess.

THEY DO NOT CHANGE. A Disputing Family writes: Will you help settle an argument about birthmarks?

1. If a pregnant woman looks at beautiful pictures, statues, etc., during the period of pregnancy, could this in itself make her child beautiful?

2. If a pregnant woman sees some horrible object which affects her, will it be possible for the child to be marked in any way by this occurrence?

3. Is it not true that the child, once having started its growth from the fertilized ovum, will not change or deviate from the pattern determined by the cell's chromosomes except by direct accident to its tissue.

I should like to have you put an end to old wives' tales about children who, because of something that happened to the mothers during pregnancy, looked and grunted like pigs, were marked with mice and snakes, or, on the other hand, turned out to be great geniuses.

MOTOR RAIL CAR ON RUBBER TIRES REACHES CHICAGO

Hailed as a Revolutionary Transport Step.

BY HAL FOUST.

A railroad passenger coach on pneumatic tires pulled into the Illinois Central station yesterday as half of a two car train of stainless steel bright and shiny as a new dime.

The equipment, revolutionary in engineering design, is en route from the Philadelphia plant of the Edward G. Budd Manufacturing company to the Fort Worth terminal of the Texas and Pacific railway. It is to be placed in regular service between Fort Worth and Texarkana.

The rubber tires are merely a novel detail as compared in significance with the radical reduction in gross weight that has been obtained by the use of new metals as a result of a new welding process. On a ride with the manufacturers' representatives from Kalamazoo, Mich., engineers explained that the electric motors were pulling 310 pounds of car for each passenger seat as contrasted with 5,000 pounds per passenger with conventional steam locomotive equipment.

Running Cost 35¢ a Mile.

"With this light weight," said Archibald H. Ehle, sales director for the Budd company, "the operating costs are only half what it costs to run a steam train for the same service. This two car train, including depreciation, crew wages, and fuel, can run for 35 cents a mile. A large intercity bus costs 30 to 35 cents a mile, without the speed, comfort, or carrying capacity of this train."

The first car of the train contains the power plant, a railway postoffice and a baggage compartment. There are two 12 cylinder engines of automotive type driving two generators which operate electric motors connected with the car for each passenger seat. This hook-up permits them to function at their rate of maximum efficiency while the drive is applied by the electric motors with a minimum of gears.

The metal in the body construction is a composition known in the trade as "18 and 8," a noncorrosive material of high tensile strength, consisting of steel with 18 per cent chromium and 8 per cent nickel. Engineers said that, on the basis of weight, its tensile strength is three or four times that of ordinary steel.

70 to 75 Miles an Hour.

During these technical explanations the train was running from 70 to 75 miles an hour over the Michigan Central tracks. The pneumatic tires, the rubber cushioned trucks, and the sealed windows held noise or vibration to a minimum and resulted in a freedom from dirt. An air conditioner changes the atmosphere, maintaining comfortable temperature and humidity regardless of weather. Moderate stream lining reduces wind noises as well as wind resistance.

"We have the bright young men from the automotive and aviation industries to thank for these developments in railroad transportation," said Thomas H. Henkle of the Budd company's Detroit plant. "And it is more than an engineering development; the reduction in railroad operating expenses will enable the railroads to recover the business they have been losing to the highways and to the air. The recovery of the railroads of America would mean much to the country's general economy."

A couple of engineers explained the

H. F. M'CORMICK'S ANSWER TO DENY ANY ENGAGEMENT

Attorneys for Harold F. McCormick, Chicago capitalist, yesterday were preparing his answer to the $1,500,000 breach of promise suit brought against him by Mrs. Rhoda Tanner Doubleday, New York divorcee. The answer, it was said, will contain a flat denial of allegations and set at rest rumors that the capitalist will not permit the case to come to trial. The denial must be filed by Nov. 20.

Attorney William Gemmill, representing Mrs. Doubleday's New York lawyers, said he would present his case on a verbal proposal of marriage purported to have been made by Mr. McCormick in Chicago a year ago and on his letters confirming the proposal. He denied that Mr. McCormick announced his proposal publicly at a house gathering in Chicago last November and that Mrs. Doubleday, at his side, affirmed it.

Contents of the letters were not revealed in Mrs. Doubleday's declaration filed Thursday. Witnesses may be called to testify to their knowledge of the proposal in corroboration of the letters, Mr. Gemmill said. If Mrs. Doubleday has such witnesses, Attorney Gemmill denied that he plans to issue subpoenas for a number of socially prominent Chicagoans to testify in her behalf.

Human Chain of Firemen Rescues Boy from Cliff

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Firemen dangled a human chain over a cliff today to rescue Yale Rice, 5, who tried to play mountain climber, got half way, and then found himself unable to go any further up or down. Three firemen made up the chain that others of their company dangled thirty feet over the edge of a cliff to reach the boy.

OFFICERS START NEGRO IN LOWELL CASE TO VIRGINIA

To Be Tried for Murder;
Led to Impeachment.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 27.—(AP)—George Crawford, Negro, was turned over to Virginia authorities tonight and departed for that state to stand trial on indictments charging the murders of Mrs. Margaret Roeling Illsley and her maid, Nina Buckner, both white women.

Crawford was in charge of Sheriff E. S. Adrian and Deputy Sheriff D. H. Cooley of Loudoun county, Virginia, when the three were entrained for Middleburg, Va.

Ends Massachusetts Link.

The departure of Crawford severed the last Massachusetts link in the case, which became nationally known. The two women were killed more than a year ago. Crawford was arrested here on Jan. 11 for a store burglary and later was identified as the man wanted in Virginia. Gov. Joseph B. Ely ordered him extradited.

Federal Judge James A. Lowell then granted Crawford a writ of habeas corpus, basing his decision on the ground that Crawford's constitutional rights had been violated by the failure of Virginia to place Negroes on grand juries.

Ordered to Vacate Writ.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals overruled this decision and the Supreme court recently refused to review the case. Judge Lowell, obeying the mandate of the Circuit court, then vacated the writ.

The action of Judge Lowell in granting the writ brought a storm of protest from the south, and he was impeached in the house of representatives. A congressional committee was named to investigate the action and recently conferred with the jurist here.

ENDS LIFE WITH POISON.

Frank Peterson, 71 years old, 3223 Wilton avenue, committed suicide yesterday by drinking poison on the front porch of his daughter's home, at 4511 Marmon avenue. Police learned that he was dependent on his inability to find work.

SATURDAY NEWS OF NEW BOOKS

Short Stories Still Live as Works of Art

Hemingway and Dorothy Parker Offer Good Ones.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.
"Winner Take Nothing," by Ernest Hemingway. (Scribners.) Published yesterday.
"After Such Pleasures," by Dorothy Parker. (Viking.) Published yesterday.

TWO volumes of short stories just published give the lie to the reiterated suggestion that short story writing is one of the minor, not major, literary arts. There are works of art in each of these volumes which as far outshine in compact splendor the customary fictional glow of the novel as the Lindbergh beacon outshines for the homing traveler the kerosene lamp in the kitchen window. There is nothing immaterial or unimportant or fragile about most of the stories in these two volumes no matter how slight in bulk they are.

Ernest Hemingway made his reputation with short stories. His final critical history will include them as surely as it includes his novels. And some of the stories in this volume will bedeck that critical brilliance. By this time the Hemingway method is no enigma to any one. Those who admire his work (and there is no question of its first rate status by critics) admire it for its superb starkness. He can say more in fewer words than practically any other American writer. He never describes what goes on in the minds of his characters, and only in the least adorned manner what happens to them. Even the background he treats in the same way as he treats plot and psychology. He implies rather than details. And yet, so perfect is that implication that the reader sees the scene, feels the action, and "suffers with" the character to a degree that becomes deep emotion.

Hemingway has been called a man's writer. Unquestionably there is nothing "feminine" about his work, and it has a virility about it which most modern writing lacks, but it is no more destined for men alone than life or death or death are wholly male experiences. Usually he writes about male affairs... the war is often in his work... but emotionally, if not actually, war is woman's work as well as man's. "A Natural History of the Dead," one of the stories reprinted from "Death in the Afternoon," is life burned to the quick... men's life... but those pages tear at a woman's heart as cruelly as ever they would at a man's.

There is one story, the last of the "Homage to Switzerland" trilogy, about a Swiss professor member of the National Geographic Society, who shows Ernest Hemingway a humorist of the first water.

Because she writes "funny" stories, Dorothy Parker is seldom given the credit due her as a serious fictional recorder. Her technique, like Ernest Hemingway's, is of our day and rooted in our age. Their methods are divergent, but alike celebrations of their period. He works from the outside, with thought and emotion implied by action. She works from the inside, with thought set down and action and outside pressure inferred. But they both reach the end of achieving a tense, at times highly emotional reaction of reality in their readers.

Dorothy Parker's situations are usually comic on the surface, tragic in their implications. "Horse" is a very funny story of a trained nurse who looked like a horse—but it makes the reader's throat tight. The humor of "Here We Are" overlays a deep strain. "Too Bad" is no solemn explanation of why divorce, but it has more truth in its few pages than most treatises on the subject.

In the introduction to a collection which she calls "Old Fashioned Tales," Zona Gale talks about a story that "does not say anything, it does something to you," and offers, presumably, some stories of that type. It seems scarcely fair to steal her expression to describe the work of others... but the stories of both Ernest Hemingway and Dorothy Parker definitely "do something to you." That they also "say something" is what makes them masterpieces.

Miss Gale's "Old Fashioned Tales" could not be called masterpieces. Most of them, I regret to say, might better have remained in the files of the magazines for which they were written, pleasant ephemera. But evidently she feels that they "do something to you." They are in most cases old-fashioned only in the fact that they celebrate old-fashioned virtues, not in the fact that they are about the past or are written from an outmoded point of view. This collection of Miss Gale's stories lacks not virtue but virtu.

Hemingway and His Record Catch

Mr. Hemingway's latest collection of short stories, "Winner Take Nothing," is reviewed today.

London Picks Season's Best Ahead of U. S.

British Book Trade at Its Peak in October.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. (Special.)—The London publishing season is now at its height. Whereas in the United States the last two months of the year are the busiest of all our publishers, in England most of the more important books have appeared by the end of October; and it is already possible to tell what the season holds for most readers. One of the books which will certainly have the largest sale of the year is "The Intelligent Man's Guide to Europe Today," in which Mr. and Mrs. G. D. H. Cole have collaborated. In the intervals, one must suppose, of work on a new "crime" novel called "The Affair at Alliquid."

The publisher of this book, following the course he took with "The Intelligent Man's Guide Through World Chaos," has produced it at a very low price, thereby assuring wide circulation for a work which tells so many of us exactly what we want to know about the problems of the old world. Mr. and Mrs. Cole, of course, are Socialists, and they have their bias; but they are both honest and well informed, so that what they write is solidly informative as well as understandable.

A book of short stories which is universally praised with more than casual superlatives is William Flomer's "The Child of Queen Victoria." Mr. Flomer, who wrote a novel, "The Case Is Altered," is the author of a small book on Cecil Rhodes written in the modern satirical manner, and he is clearly possessed of a talent that is worth watching, although it has not yet found its best means of expression.

Finally, I have received copies of the two books, "Literature in My Time" and "The Theater in My Time," by, respectively, Compton Mackenzie and St. John Ervine.

Mr. Mackenzie, far from the London cozier, is unimpressed by their artificial standards, has looked upon the literary world of the last twenty years as it seems to him in the remote Scottish island of Barra.

Mr. Ervine, likewise far from London, but less far than Mr. Mackenzie, since he lives in Devonshire and can be in the theaterland within four hours, tells about the stage and the dramatists as they seem in retrospect from his country home.

Neither writer has forgotten anything and distance has lent no artificial standard, but detachment. These two books will be much liked and much argued over. They are original and nonconformist. And they will cause some annoyance in highbrow circles. Mr. Mackenzie is a highbrow hand critic of Lawrence and Mr. Ervine because he trails his coat as if by instinct and is always setting a match to somebody's temper.

Mignon G. Eberhart Pens Mystery Triumph in 'The Dark Garden'

BY MORTIMER QUICK.

"The Dark Garden," by Mignon G. Eberhart. (Crime Club.)

So intricate is the hydra-headed crime that Mignon G. Eberhart unleashes in "The Dark Garden" that you come almost to the end before suspicion veers to any one of the eccentric beings who darken and enliven its pages. Somewhere along Chicago's north shore assorted murder is done. Somebody knows too much. Horror mounts from an uneasy drive through fog-drenched streets to a terror that creeps into the very bones. As a matter of fact, everybody except the reader has a rotten time for three hundred odd pages.

See, if the likes good mystery stories, is held spellbound by one of the best left of this one when the murderer gets through. [To conceal the sex of that murderer] nips them off under your very nose and almost within eight feet of the reader's face. The book is assembled, and with such skill that when I next feel good and murderous I'm going to ask Mrs. Eberhart to suggest some fool-proof method to satisfy the urge.

There is one person in the book that you are going to enjoy: Clarence with his unfortunate conviction of sin and unerring capacity for putting his foot in it. If it weren't for Clarence and the sound of the family as an audience of horror. But then again, if it weren't for Clarence murder might never have been suspected.

But read "The Dark Garden" for yourself and you'll see what I mean. Also, and this is a point which can be trusted to do so triumphantly what they set out to do.

A Provincial Lady Likes Way America Lives

Here's Real Lowdown on Miss Delafield.

BY ARTHUR MEERER JR.

THE Provincial Lady has come to town. Ever since her arrival the telephone has been madly ringing, with agitated voices at the other end of the line anxiously inquiring, "What color are her eyes?" or "What does Miss Delafield eat for breakfast?" or, wanting to know her opinions on [a] Gen. Johnson, [b] American plumbing, and [c] the domestic life of the Chicago woman.

Restraining with difficulty an almost uncontrollable desire to reply that her left eye is black and her right pansy blue, while her preferred morning diet consists of Blini and woe boiled in beer, I shall try to tell you a little about our distinguished visitor, whose twenty-five published volumes, beginning with "Zella Sees Herself," which appeared in 1914, and ending with "Gay Life," a brilliantly written satire of life on the Riviera, are by all odds my favorite books in the world.

In the first place, although she is English, perhaps the most thoroughly English woman novelist now writing as far as the subject matter, characters and settings of her books are concerned, E. M. Delafield is half French by birth, and looks at her native land with a detachment that no purely British author could possibly possess.

Then, though this is only her second trip to the States and the first one on which she has been able to see anything of the interior of the country, she has already qualified, it seems to me, as an excellent American by confessing to a passion for such supposedly exotic local specialties as ice water, steam heat, and crooners.

There appears to exist over here amongst reporters and other members of her public an almost limitless curiosity concerning the details of her life in England, based, I suppose, on the fact that she has used it or a background very similar to it in a number of her books besides the ever popular "Provincial Lady." Her nearest neighbors are more than ten miles away, that she had electric lights installed last year, so there are no more bedtime processions with candles, that she drives her own car, plays the piano at village entertainments.

In fact, this greed for information has reached such alarming proportions that I wish I had never admitted I had had the privilege of visiting

By ELIZABETH SPRIGGE

Each member of old Thomas Rushbrooke's large family lived continuously under the dark veil of his tyrannical will. Each one of them strove in a different way to escape.

This brilliant and deeply moving story of modern life depicts the clash of wills in a large family, the brief moments of understanding, the way in which its members are bound by blood and separated by their hopes and desires.

Society Must Rush to Many Events Today

Miss Virginia Chapman to Become Bride.

BY JUDITH CASS.

ANOTHER of those busy Saturday days when society will be dashing hither and yon most of the day and night, for there are all sorts of interesting things happening both in town and in the suburbs. One of the events of the day on every one's calendar who is "in society" is the wedding this afternoon of Miss Virginia Chapman, the third of the four attractive daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John Adams Chapman, and J. Brooks Fenno Jr., of Boston.

Two of her sisters, a cousin and four girls who were classmates of hers at St. Timothy's will attend Miss Chapman when she becomes the bride of Mr. Fenno. The service is to be read at 4:30 o'clock by the pastor, the Rev. Harrison Ray Anderson, in the Fourth Presbyterian church, after which there will be a reception at the Casino.

Miss Margaret Chapman will be her sister's maid of honor and the bride's matron will be another sister, Miss Ellen Chapman, a cousin, Miss Patty McCormick, Miss Jean Schwegel, Miss Jane Brooks, Mrs. Edgar Stanton Jr. (Rosemond Baker), all of Chicago, and Miss Gertrude Thompson of St. Paul.

James M. Robbins of Philadelphia will act as Mr. Fenno's best man and ushering will be James Hinkle, Francis H. Cummings, Sargent Collier and Laurence E. Danon of Boston; Edward T. Herndon and John Sise of New York; Samuel E. Ewing Jr. of Philadelphia and Lucien E. Williams of Chicago.

Bridegroom's Parents Are Here from Boston.

Mr. Fenno's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Brooks Fenno, have come from Boston for the wedding and are staying at the Drake hotel, as are the others of his relatives and friends who are here for the occasion. They are H. Bradlee Fenno, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Thordike, Mrs. Laurence C. Fenno and her daughter, Miss Sylvia Wolcott, and George Greener, all of Boston; Mrs. George S. Robbins and Miss Mary Cole of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Robbins of Andover, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. John Simpkins of Yarmouthport, Mass., and Miss Belle Gurnee of New York.

Mr. Fenno, who is a noted amateur tennis star, and his bride will live in Boston, but they have not decided yet just where they will reside.

Mrs. Leveett Thompson is entertaining the out of town guests at luncheon today before the wedding. Yesterday (Friday) the members of the Chapman-Fenno bridal party had luncheon at the Casino with the former Betty Brown and her new husband, Allen Earle Whitman, whom many of the former Miss Brown's Chicago friends were meeting for the first time, as his home is in New York, where he and Miss Brown surprised their friends and were married last Monday. Mrs. Whitman had planned the party for Miss Chapman before she went east ten days ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitman are to be here only until next Friday, for business demands Mr. Whitman's return to New York then. In these next few days, however, every one of Mrs. Whitman's friends is bound to see her and to meet her husband, for they are to be the guests at numerous parties.

Browns Will Give Reception Tomorrow.

Today, of course, they are devoting to the Chapman-Fenno nuptials and the attendant festivities, and tomorrow is the reception at which Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Brown are introducing their son-in-law to their friends. On Monday afternoon Mrs. Winston Elling is having them and several other friends for cocktails and that evening they will be the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Rensselaer W. Cox. Mrs. Cox is an aunt of Mrs. Whitman.

Miss Eleanor Wheeler and Miss Paula Uihlein are having a shower for Mrs. Whitman. Just what kind hasn't been decided yet. . . . on Tuesday afternoon and Tuesday night Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Freeman are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Whitman at dinner at their home. I. Newton Perry is insisting that they must reserve an evening for him, although he hasn't yet made up his mind the kind of party he will give.

Dorothy Moorehead to Be Bride Today.

Another Chicago girl will become the bride of a Bostonian today in the Fourth Presbyterian church—in the chapel, however—Miss Dorothy Moorehead, who will be married to Asaph Churchill Jr. It is to be a very small wedding, at high noon, with only members of the families and a few friends present. Dr. Anderson will officiate.

Miss Moorehead, who is the daughter of Mrs. Hirst Moorehead and Dr. Frederick B. Moorehead, will be attended by Mrs. Washington Dodge II, of New York. Mr. Churchill's best man will be George Higginson II, of Boston and Colorado Springs. There will be a breakfast for the families following the ceremony.

Mr. Churchill's father is not here for the wedding because of illness, but his mother and sister, Miss Olivia Churchill, and his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey P. Hood II, are here from Boston.

Mr. Churchill and his bride will go to Colorado on their wedding trip and will be at home in New York after Nov. 25.

Harold B. Smith to Entertain Tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Smith are giving a Halloween party tonight that will also be a housewarming in their new home in Barrington. The party is being given for Miss Esther Bird of Greenwich, N. Y., who is visiting Mrs. Smith, and for Mrs. Smith's sister, Mrs. Dennis Harmon, who is

Two Buds Bow to Society at Dinner Dance

Kean Hughes, Lucy Harrison in Joint Debut.

Debutante festivity for the fall and winter seasons moved to town last night when Miss Kean Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest K. Hughes, and Miss Lucy Harrison, the Junior Carter H. Harrison's daughter, made their bows to society at a dinner-dance at the Casino.

Shortly after 8 o'clock the receiving line composed of the two debutantes and their mothers formed in the modernistically decorated reception hall of the club. Unfortunately Mrs. and Mrs. William M. Burton, Miss Hughes' grandparents, who were both giving the party for the two buds, could not be present.

Never have Miss Hughes and Miss Harrison looked more stunning than they did last evening as they welcomed their friends one after the other. It is seldom that a debutante wears for her coming out party anything so sophisticated as a gown with even a semblance of a train, but there was something extremely youthful and lovely about the short train that finished Miss Hughes' white satin dress. Tiny plaits of satin covered her shoulders and two huge bows of the same material finished the low décolletage.

Like her sister debutante, Miss Harrison, she carried a sheath bouquet from which she removed the center group of orchids at dinner to wear as corsage. Miss Hughes' orchids shaded from deep purple to a delicate shade of lavender, while those of Miss Harrison were white surrounded by lilies of the valley.

The large silver bow with which Miss Harrison's bouquet was tied matched the decoration of her striking crimson velvet gown. Her only jewelry was a delicately jeweled coronet.

Mrs. Harrison's shoulder bouquet of white orchids matched that of her daughter and contrasted effectively with her gown of black velvet. Mrs. Hughes was wearing a becoming shade of periwinkle blue satin that used for its only ornament flowers of royal purple.

Among the post-debutantes at the dinner-dance was Miss Louise Dewey, stunning in a silk gown of brilliant crimson, who received felicitations from her many friends on her engagement to Edward B. Smith. On her shoulder she wore the lovely deep purple orchids her fiancé had sent her. Other post-debutantes present were Miss Isabel Gordon, in deep blue velvet, escorted by Edmund Sullivan, and her sister, Miss Marion Gordon, in olive green velvet, who went down the receiving line with William Goltz; Miss Barbara Graf with Charles Conwell; Miss Eleanor McNally and her brother, Andrew McNally III, and Miss Suzanne Morris.

Among the debutantes were Miss Mary Leonard in a stunning gown of midnight blue, escorted by John L. Fortune Jr.; Miss Barbara Bantler, wearing a becoming frock of gold silk; Miss Jean Hyman, in gold lame; Miss Jean Wilhelm, for whom the Junior Edward A. Gudabya are giving a dance one week from tonight at the Casino; the Lampert twins, Lillian and Myrtle, both in black velvet; Miss Charlotte Hubbard, Miss Marie Louise Gardner, Miss Jean O'Brien, Miss Roslyn Paine, and Miss Mary O'Brien.

Hold Fashion Show Tonight at Winnetka

A fashion show with a bevy of the most popular girls on the north shore modeling is sufficient reason for Winnetkans spending this Saturday evening in the neighborhood. The show, sponsored by the Winnetka board of the Northwestern University settlement, is to be held at 8:30 o'clock in the Jane Kuppenheimer Memorial hall of the Skokie school.

There are to be thirty-two mannequins in all, including five young models. The latter are Mrs. Turner Biddle, Mrs. John Dorn, Mrs. Joseph B. Magnus, Mrs. Norman MacLellan, and Mrs. Gilbert M. Smith.

A Russian Balalaika orchestra is to furnish music for the promenade and afterwards Marion Kinney and Douglas MacMillan, as a dance team, will furnish several exhibition numbers. Then there's to be dancing and bridge for all of the guests.

The Moraine hotel in Highland Park will be the scene of a gay party tonight, when several hundred suburbanites gather there to dance and play games for the benefit of the Highland Park and Ravinia infant welfare. "Potpourri" is the name that has been given the party, for it best describes the amusements and variety of entertainment that will be found at the affair.

Miss Veronice Beatty, Miss Virginia Melody, Miss Janet Boyd, and Miss Mary Mavor will sell dignities, and "Sammy" will be found off in a corner with a piano. There are to be several dinner parties preceding the dance. One of the largest is that of Mrs. Elwood Lewis, which will be given at the Exmoor Country club. Mrs. Malcolm Vail is having a dinner for the younger generation at her home, and the Junior Calvin Fentress will be entertaining some of the "young marrieds." Other giving dinners are Mrs. George Childs, Mrs. John Harmon, Mrs. Truman Metzler, Mrs. Robert Hill, and Mrs. Edwin T. Johnson.

At the first of the Girl Scout concert Monday evening in Orchestra hall, with Lawrence Tibbett as the artist, attention will center during the intermission on the box of Mrs. Arthur L. Farwell. Mrs. Farwell, who is commander of Chicago's Girl Scouts, is to have Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as one of her guests. Others who will be seated near by with box parties include Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bentley, Mrs. Cyrus Bentley, Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, Mrs. William S. Monroe, Mrs. John B. Brenner, and Mrs. Lester J. Norris.

Lloyd C. Douglas, author of "The Magnificent Obsession," is speaking this morning at the second lecture of the Town Hall series being held in the Drake hotel. Mr. Douglas has chosen "The Flight to Freedom" for his subject. A percentage of the returns from these lectures is being given to the Vocational Society for Shut-ins. The same young women who ushered last Saturday morning will usher again today—the Misses Helen Dawes, Jean Hyman, Virginia Ashcraft, Betty Alexander, Mary Cook, Ruth Seaton, Peggy Wiley, Barbara Eldridge, and Kean Hughes.

The Kenilworth center of the Chicago Infant Welfare society is planning a barn dance for the evening of Saturday, Nov. 11, which will be held in the Kenilworth club. The profits from the dance will be used for the support of the Seward Park Settlement station. Mrs. Edmond Burke is chairman of the party, and on her committee are Mrs. Philip May, Mrs. Walter Glass, Mrs. John L. Pike, Miss Eleanor Lippincott, and Miss Mary Branigan.

Good Morning!
War hysteria and her ill-starred offspring, injustices, have set for portraits in this picture.

The story, simply and movingly told, is that of a New England girl, Mary, who becomes the wife of Hugo, a young German professor. He comes to teach chemistry in a college located near her home town.

It is love at first sight with them, and they are married over the objections of Mary's people, who had long planned on having her wed her cousin and childhood playmate, Jeff.

Hugo takes out his naturalization papers, and Mary, Hugo, and their small son live happily together and at peace with their neighbors until war is declared. Then the naturalization papers are forgotten by those who till that time had thought of Hugo as an American citizen. Only the fact of his German extraction is remembered.

Tragic days follow. The little son dies. . . . And conditions prevail that result in the separation of the husband and wife—who are to meet again in France, where Mary is a service worker and Hugo is being hunted down as a spy.

The finale is a touching one.

Here is a tale that could easily have been mawkish, made true, strong, and appealing through the fine reticence of its delineators and the sincerity and intelligence of its director. You will see a new side to Barbara Stanwyck, and, I think, be much impressed by the work of Otto Kruger. Scenes that will engrave themselves on your memory are the one where the young German father watches by the bedside of his dying child, the episode in which the baby's dog is stoned by village boys, and the occasion of a certain dawn in France, when troops march to the front past the open window of a room where a man and woman who have loved each other truly from the moment of first meeting quietly drink a cup that was not to pass them by.

See you tomorrow!

The Catholic Woman's league will hold its annual philanthropy card party at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel. By means of this affair the league raises most of the money it contributes each year to six local charities. Mrs. Richard M. Receive Reservations for Dinner Honoring Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt

More than 600 reservations had been received last night in room 652 of the Palmer house for the dinner to be given Tuesday evening in the grand ballroom of the hotel for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Miss Celia Howard of Elgin, president of the Illinois State Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, the sponsoring organization, declared that the number of requests for tickets indicated a capacity attendance.

Mrs. Roosevelt is to arrive in Chicago Monday morning by train from Washington to attend the 1933 Mobilization for Human Needs conference at the Stevens hotel. She will be the principal speaker at a dinner at the hotel that evening.

Mrs. Roosevelt's appearance in Chicago on Tuesday will be restricted for the most part to the role of auditor and honored guest.

Front Views and Profiles By June Provines

IT is of interest to music lovers, perhaps, that Boston's Philip Hale, probably the best known program annotator in the country, is in town. Mr. Critch—Hale writes the program notes for the Boston Symphony orchestra, including, naturally, those in the program when that orchestra played here Monday. Past 80, Mr. Hale, white-haired, slight of build, with a clear blue eye, is spending most of the time quietly with his sister on Burton place. One of the few visitors he has received is Carleton Smith, the young Chicagoan who combines teaching economics at De Paul university with lecturing on music. Despite the fact that Mr. Hale says he finds talking about music disagreeable ("Next to listening to the most disagreeable thing is talking about it," he says), he actually said, he talked at some length. . . . There is a "lot of rot in Bach," who, he says, repeated many things he had written according to a formula. . . . Mozart, he thinks, was perhaps the greatest of musical geniuses. . . . Walt Whitman wrote the best line ever written in English about music, "All music is what awakes from you when you are reminded by the instrument." . . . Ernest Newman of the London Times is the greatest living writer about music. . . . Music critic himself for years, he adds that "musical criticism isn't worth a damn."

THERE seems to be no limit to the influence of "The Big Bad Wolf" and Walt Disney's silly symphony about the three little pigs. A friend of ours called the head of a business the other morning and asked for an immediate appointment. After due explanation the appointment was granted and our friend rushed over to the executive's office. He found the executive apologetic because he was unshaven. "I've got half on my chinny chin chin," he said plaintively.

A PARTY we should like to have attended in New York the other evening was that given by Chicago's young Orson Wells, the 18 year old boy back from a triumphant season in Ireland to appear in three of Katharine Cornell's plays this winter. Miss Cornelia Lunt of Evanston, who, as you may recall, recently celebrated her 90th birthday, was guest of honor. Young Orson's friend and patron, Dr. Maurice Bernstein, who tells us about the party, says that Alexander Woolcott, Dorothy Parker, and many other celebrities were present. Mr. Woolcott spent some time talking with white haired, blue eyed, gay Miss Lunt, and as he walked away said smilingly to another guest: "And I learned about women from her."

IT was at the Smith college exhibit at the Fair. A woman approached the booth, picked up the pencil beside the alumnae register and asked if she should sign her name.

"Are you an alumna?" asked the attendant.

"Alumna?" asked the woman. "So that is what you have to be to get into Smith."

LUNCHING in a party that included two handsome young Argentinians and a young coffee merchant from Brazil in the glow of pink-shaded candles at the Blackstone the girl is just trying to create glamour, it became apparent how little North Americans really know about South America. Gauchos, wheat, and tango dancers are the popular conception of Argentina, snakes and coffee of Brazil. One of the young Argentinians, Alberto Sanchez Ardis, who arrived two days ago from Paris in a friend he ran into at Pouquet's, Enrique Valiente Noailles, laughed, a little ruefully, we are afraid, as he told of the map of the world in color he had seen that morning in the Hall of Science.

"There is a tressador pictured on the map for Buenos Aires, and we do not have the bull-fights at all," he said. "And a girl in a bathing suit represented a vicinity where there is absolutely no swimming."

"In fact, where even drinking water is scarce," his friend interposed.

He tried to get a similar map to send back to Buenos Aires, he said, but, fortunately perhaps, was unable to do so.

INSTALLMENT XXIV. FLAMING SUSPICIONS.

After standing several minutes before the hotel the man turned and crossed the road to the principal entrance. Here he stopped and looked up. Bun started as she heard a step on the balcony above her. She drew back into the shadows, but not too far to still watch the man below. He was still standing there, looking up and waiting. Suddenly a thrill of joy swept over her. He was looking up at her windows. The step on the balcony above sounded again and drove the thrill from her left in place a sensation that was dull and yet full of flaming suspicions. Was it possible that he was watching Mrs. Crawford's windows instead of hers? While she waited a piece of paper fluttered before her eyes, waved in the still air, then sank down to the street below. She could see it lying there distinctly. The man evidently saw it, too, for the next moment he was crossing the street again and, stooping, had picked up the paper and put it in his pocket. This done, he walked further along the esplanade and disappeared in the shadows.

Bun rubbed her eyes as if to get rid of blurred vision. Then she listened intently. A sound from the balcony above told her that the person there had returned to the room and closed the door. She, too, returned to her room.

Bun was not nearly so prompt the next morning as she had intended being. She had not slept until early morning and then heavily, and when she began to dress she found herself doing it very slowly. It was almost impossible to decide what she wanted to put on; not that it made much difference, she thought. She might appear in sackcloth and ashes so far as making any effect went. Liberté, seeing her hesitation, asked if for some unexpected reason it was her wedding morn. Bun scowled over the pleasantry and retorted that it would be much better if Liberté took more time over her toilette.

"But I, mademoiselle, I know what pleases Frenchmen. It is much more a fat pocketbook than it is a fat coat of paint and powder."

"And a fat body." Bun snapped. "Give me that gray linen frock and the blue hat. Have you seen Mrs. Crawford go out this morning?"

Liberté registered amazement. "I thought you were watching her every movement," Bun continued.

"while you slept last night I saw her throw a note to a man in the street below."

Liberté was at once all attention. "Is mademoiselle making some fun?" Bun got out of replying by hurrying into her dress. Yet once she was in it, the blue hat tried and discarded and a yellow straw put on in its place, she held back. She had not the slightest idea how she was going to meet Finlay that morning or how she wanted to meet him. Should she wait for him to explain what he was doing last night, or should she go straight at him with questions that he would have to answer? She almost decided the possibility of his not mentioning the subject. That, of course, could mean one thing only, that he was not acting in full confidence with her. Her suspicions hurt her more than she was willing to admit. There she was, acting the silly school girl again! And only twenty-four before she had never heard of this man. She must get hold of herself. This would never do.

She found him seated at a table on the terrace. He rose with a smile that scattered all her misgivings of the night; it was so entirely frank and boyish—dominating, too. She was glad she had chosen the yellow straw hat. "I didn't know what to order. Is it tomato juice or sauerkraut?"

"It's plain tea and toast," Bun slipped into the chair. "And perhaps some jam—for a break in training."

"Did you have any inspiration during the night?" Bun shook her head and studied him from a new angle. It was nothing less than absurd to suspect a man like that unless he was so clever that he used frankness as a foil. She began to feel baffled under his steady gaze. Hadn't she scouted the idea of Mrs. Crawford being too stupid to be trusted? And who could have acted more cleverly than she had? Why should not the same trait run through the whole family? Soon she would begin distrusting even old Finlay himself. She made a swift attempt to put aside all these disturbing thoughts. The thing to do was to be as frank as Finlay with these disturbing thoughts. The thing to do was to be as frank as Finlay with these disturbing thoughts.

Hadn't she scouted the idea of Mrs. Crawford being too stupid to be trusted? And who could have acted more cleverly than she had? Why should not the same trait run through the whole family? Soon she would begin distrusting even old Finlay himself. She made a swift attempt to put aside all these disturbing thoughts. The thing to do was to be as frank as Finlay with these disturbing thoughts. The thing to do was to be as frank as Finlay with these disturbing thoughts.

"while you slept last night I saw her throw a note to a man in the street below."

Liberté was at once all attention. "Is mademoiselle making some fun?" Bun got out of replying by hurrying into her dress. Yet once she was in it, the blue hat tried and discarded and a yellow straw put on in its place, she held back. She had not the slightest idea how she was going to meet Finlay that morning or how she wanted to meet him. Should she wait for him to explain what he was doing last night, or should she go straight at him with questions that he would have to answer? She almost decided the possibility of his not mentioning the subject. That, of course, could mean one thing only, that he was not acting in full confidence with her. Her suspicions hurt her more than she was willing to admit. There she was, acting the silly school girl again! And only twenty-four before she had never heard of this man. She must get hold of herself. This would never do.

She found him seated at a table on the terrace. He rose with a smile that scattered all her misgivings of the night; it was so entirely frank and boyish—dominating, too. She was glad she had chosen the yellow straw hat. "I didn't know what to order. Is it tomato juice or sauerkraut?"

"It's plain tea and toast," Bun slipped into the chair. "And perhaps some jam—for a break in training."

"Did you have any inspiration during the night?" Bun shook her head and studied him from a new angle. It was nothing less than absurd to suspect a man like that unless he was so clever that he used frankness as a foil. She began to feel baffled under his steady gaze. Hadn't she scouted the idea of Mrs. Crawford being too stupid to be trusted? And who could have acted more cleverly than she had? Why should not the same trait run through the whole family? Soon she would begin distrusting even old Finlay himself. She made a swift attempt to put aside all these disturbing thoughts. Society Must Rush to Many Events Today

here from Switzerland, Mrs. Harmon will be here until after Christmas and Mr. Harmon will spend the holidays here with his wife and her family. Mrs. Smith is the former Polly Hart, daughter of the H. Stillson Harbison of Barrington, and Mrs. Harmon was Mimi Hart.

Children's Party at Saddle and Cycle

Twenty-five youngsters, friends of Frances Amberg, 11 years old, daughter of the Harold Amberg, will duck for apples, have their fortunes told, pin the tail on a large black cat and do all the other traditional things that children have done for years to celebrate Halloween this afternoon at the Saddle and Cycle club. It isn't Frances' birthday, but every few years her mother plans a party for her during the school year, for her birthday is in midsummer, when she and most of her playmates are scattered around the country at summer resorts, so a party isn't feasible then.

The same decorations that will delight the youngsters this afternoon will give the proper spooky and ghostly atmosphere to the Halloween dinner dance that is being given at the club tonight for the members. About 200 merrymakers are expected.

Miss Margaret Quan has invited several dozen of her special friends to drop in for cocktails this afternoon after the many early afternoon events that fill the day's calendar. The party will be at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Quan, at 35 East Elm street.

Eighteen friends of Miss Leslie Keith and Miss Nancy Morse will dine at the Charles Farwell Winston's home in Lake Forest tonight at a party Mr. and Mrs. Winston are giving for these two lovely debutantes.

Sims Family Will Give Jolly Party

In a real autumn setting Miss Priscilla Sims, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Sims, and her brother, Edwin W. Sims, Jr., will receive more than five hundred of their friends at a supper dance this evening at the Fortnightly club. The Sims parties are always very gay and festive occasions and this one promises to be especially so with all of Mr. and Mrs. Sims' children at home.

Mrs. John Gamble, who was Helen Sims before her marriage, arrived on Wednesday and will be here most of next week. On Thursday the Richard Sims family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Sims, her sister-in-law, Miss Margaret Goehat, Miss Charlotte Hubbard, Miss Ethel Dixon, Miss Katherine Drake, Miss Helen Gillette and her sister, Marietta. Although this is not coming out party for Miss Sims, it will have all the earmarks of a debut, since the popular young lady was away in school when all of her friends were bowing to society.

Prizes to Be Awarded at Horse Show Ball

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Austin H. Niblack, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mitchell, and Mr. and Mrs. John Hay Whitney are some of those who will entertain guests at the World's Fair Horse show ball to be held tonight in the Ball Tabarin of the Hotel Sherman. Twenty-two state prizes will be awarded to horse show winners at the ball.

At a very quiet ceremony at 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, in the church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, Miss Louise Juergens, daughter of Mrs. William F. Juergens, became the bride of William P. Smyth, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Smyth. The former Miss Juergens and Mr. Smyth had been engaged for some time, but they decided on a very quiet wedding, and had made no formal announcement of their engagement.

Mrs. Smyth was graduated from Miss Bennett's school at Millbrook, N. Y., and later studied in Paris and Berlin. Mr. Smyth is a Dartmouth graduate. They are sailing Wednesday for Havana and Vera Cruz. From there they will go by train to Mexico City to spend a few weeks.

By mutual consent the engagement to be married of Miss Betty Lee Rich of New York and Robert E. Kenyon Jr. of Lake Forest has been broken.

Naughtiness Is Eternal Trait of Childhood

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

You've seen those moving pictures of a rose unfolding, from bud to full blossom. In a few minutes, before your eyes, I have a film, my own private movie, that in an hour or so shows the unfolding of childhood—from babyhood on through adolescence. It is an intimate moving picture, taken in the family. The postman delivers it to me . . . yes, it is my correspondence.

One of the most interesting things that grow out of the conducting of a child training department is the perspective it provides, at first hand, of the evolution of childhood.

Often I think it would help parents if they could see these letters, sorted out in order. That is one reason why I use them often in this column—because it helps mothers to realize that what your child does is not so awful, not abnormal, not—usually—even a real problem. It helps them to know that certain behavior under certain given circumstances is universal.

MINUTE MYSTERY

By H. A. RIPLEY

"I had dinner last night with the renowned sports authority of Two Chicago Tribune, Charlie Fredericks," Prof. Fordney told his class. "He was very interested in the death of the football hero, John Johnson, on the eve of the big game of the season and knowing that I worked on the case, asked me for details. 'Unlike most crimes, the murder of Johnson was rather an involved affair. It took me several hours in my laboratory to discover the very rare poison which had caused his death. After explaining the technicalities of my test to Fredericks for the details. 'I get it! I get it! Very clever!' 'Well, here's a problem for you, professor. One you won't have to solve in your laboratory. Listen. 'I know you're a baseball fan, so it should be easy. Supposing the New York Giants and the Chicago Cubs were playing in Chicago; that there were three men on the bases; no one out in the first half of the 11th inning and the score tied. The batsman had three balls and two strikes called on him when the manager put in a relief hurler. The new pitcher went into the box at bat on the mound, went through the motions of tying both shoe strings, arose, flung his cap to the ground, looked at his dugout, touched the rosin sack, pitched one ball and won the game! How did he do it?' Fredericks asked me. 'As you chase are all baseball fans you should be able to answer this immediately. Quickly now!'

HOW DID THE RELIEF PITCHER WIN THE BALL GAME?

Turquoise Berry of Delicate Blue Inspires Design

Turquoise Berries.

BY NANCY CABOT. The famous, dainty turquoise berry which grows so profusely in the south inspired today's quilt pattern. In this design the leaves of the vine should be in the deepest green, the berries in a lovely lilac blue. This is an attractive color scheme that can be carried out in an entire room.

For a quilt pattern of this design send 5 cents in stamps or coin to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn street.

Old Guard List Most Glamorous Screen Women

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

HOLLYWOOD.—[Special.]—At luncheon table the other day were some of the Old Guard, men who had been in the movie game for eighteen, twenty, and more years. The talk got on to Garbo and what makes the woman so glamorous, then on to glamorous women generally.

Charles Stickle, Bull, portrait photographer, the only man whom Garbo has allowed to photograph her during the last five years, was among those present. Mr. Bull was asked to name the most glamorous women of his entire screen career. He named, and of course, Garbo. He named, and this is a game you may play at your own luncheon or dinner table when NRA topics run out, Theda Bara, Barbara La Marr, Nita Naldi in the Blood and Sand days, Mae Murray, and, of course, Garbo.

Choice of Theda Bara was questioned; Mae Murray's name, too, but other men present volunteered their own distinguished place in their respective heydays. Later, talking to Alice Brady about glamorous women of the stages she named Katherine Cornell, Lynn Fontanne, and Ina Clail. Miss Cornell for the dark, brooding, mysterious quality that makes you think of cathedrals and things like that; Miss Fontanne for a brittle careless quality, a mental appeal rather than a physical one; and Miss Clail for the "band box" perfection of clothes and grooming.

New York, Oct. 27.—[Special.]—Joseph E. Widener gave a supper party at the Central Park Casino last night. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. B. Widener, Mr. and Mrs. Axel Wickfield, and Mrs. Fair Vanderbilt.

Mr. and Mrs. DeForest Grant have returned to New York and are at their apartment at 320 Park avenue.

Recipes, whole battalions of them, have been asked for this week. Some of them have sent us scrambling to find the answers. But so much the more fun. For if recipes and wandering facts are to be found well enjoy being the finders. Or if you've been having sick cakes, muffins, etc., send the details in and we'll do our best to furnish you with a diagnosis.

Mrs. T. M. writes for a recipe for Rosky. In case it's a new name to you, Rosky is a Slovak cookie:

ROSKY.
4 cups sifted flour
1/2 pound leaf lard, ground
1/2 cup sugar
2 egg yolks
1/2 cake yeast, dissolved in 1/2 cup lukewarm water
1/2 teaspoon salt
FILLING:
1 1/2 cups walnut meats, ground
1 cup sugar
1 cup vanilla
1/2 cup hot milk

Mix all the ingredients in the first list and knead well for about twenty-five minutes. Then let the dough remain from six to twelve hours in a cool place. After that length of time roll it out to a thickness of about one-eighth of an inch on a floured board. Cut into four inch squares. Mix the filling ingredients together and place one and one-half teaspoons filling on each square and spread. Then with each cookie take one corner of the square and roll up and bend this roll into a crescent or half oval shape. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for thirty minutes.

Mrs. E. J. requests the recipe for Paradise Jelly, and since it's such a good recipe for fall use, we're passing it on to all the jelly makers:

PARADISE JELLY.
15 medium sized oranges
3 quart cranberries
20 apples
Slice apples, but do not peel or core; peel and slice the quinces, but do not core. Place in a kettle with the cranberries and add water to cover the fruit. Boil until soft and drain in a jelly bag. Measure the juice, bring to the boiling point, and skim. To each cup of juice add one cup sugar. Boil until a few drops harden on a cold plate. Pour into clean, hot jelly glasses and paraffin at once.

Dance Tonight

The Illinois state chapter of Psi Delta Sigma national sorority opens its fall season with a formal dance in the Gold room of the Congress hotel this evening. Miss Gertrude Volter, 6460 Northwest highway, is in charge of arrangements. Mrs. Beatrice Peters, Ross, 8314 East 8th avenue, is Illinois president of the organization.

GERTRUDE VOLTER.

THE STAGE

The Selwyn theater will reopen Nov. 19 after a long period of inactivity with "Sailor, Beware!" a comedy that was recently staged with notable success in New York. A special company has been organized for a Chicago engagement with Lawrence Grey and Marjorie Peterson in the leading roles. The former has had a career in the films.

"Sailor, Beware!" was written by Kenyon Nicholson, author of "The Barker," "Torch Song," and "Step-daughters of War," and Charles Robinson.

Katharine Cornell returned to New York yesterday after three months in Europe to begin preparations for a season's tour in three plays—"The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Romeo and Juliet" (marking her debut in Shakespeare), and "Candida." She told interviewers that she believed "the road" to be the arena where theatrical reputations are won.

"Broadway," she said, "is full of hot-house players who have never been out of the city. . . I am sure that my tour will be successful. Audiences all over the country are hungry for good plays."

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Columbus, O., Oct. 27.—Ohio State's workout today for tomorrow's game with Northwestern turned into a strike meeting, the first of its kind in the history of the institution. Following unanimous support of resolutions, all letter men and seniors on the squad advised the university they would not take the field against the Wildcat unless State Representative Grant Ward was prevented from broadcasting the game over the official university station, WOSU. Ward regularly puts the game on the air and has been scheduled to do so tomorrow.

Formal action was taken as a result of Ward's attacks on Coach Sam S. Williamson since Ohio's defeat by Michigan at Ann Arbor last Saturday. Ward, a 1912 graduate of Ohio State, has been identified with legislation favorable to his alma mater during his term in the legislature. He played varsity football at State and during the Wilce administration was line coach. He also had a part in the direction of intramural athletic activities. At present he is serving as football expert on a Columbus newspaper and is said to receive a $100 fee for each game he broadcasts.

"I will broadcast tomorrow's game, just as I have all of Ohio State's games for the last five years," Ward said late tonight.

Strikers Modify Demand.
The players at first resolved they would not go against Northwestern if Ward were permitted to sit in the press box, but before the action was submitted to university authorities, they modified the action to bear solely on the matter of the broadcasting of the homecoming game.

Preliminary action was taken at a secret meeting during the morning and after further discussion Co-Captains Joe Gullus and Sid Gillman were delegated to present the strike edict to Athletic Director Lynn W. St. John. St. John advised the captain that the athletic department had no jurisdiction over broadcasting and suggested that they present their grievance to President George W. Rightmire. Gullus and Gillman waited outside the president's office for several hours.

Committee in Quandary.
The committee finally got to President Rightmire after practice. He told Gullus and Gillman that there was no connection between Ward's broadcasting and the newspaper writings which offended Williamson and the players, and that inasmuch as Ward's broadcasting always had been satisfactory he was not inclined to take action. So the situation there and returned for the night in a quandary without reaching a definite decision on what they will do tomorrow.

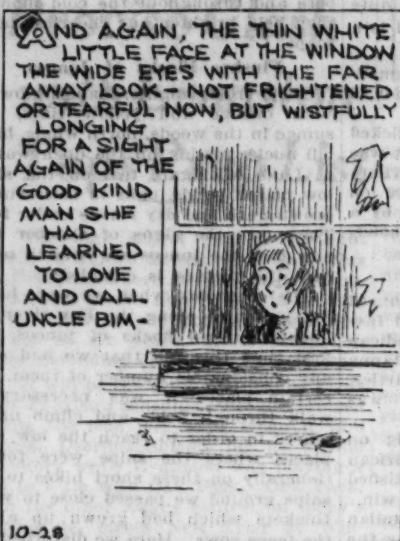

The ticket sale was not halted during the situation reached by the strikers, and there is a belief that some adjustment will see Ohio State's full squad on the field come tomorrow afternoon. Late in the afternoon some of the so-called calmer heads had started to say the action probably was "meant more as a request than a demand."

It's O. K. with N. U.
The Wildcats were quite willing to start the contest as underdogs. The Evanstonians are confident they will look better tomorrow than they have at any time this season. Coach Dick Hanley, known as a professional teamer, frankly states he expects his team to win tomorrow.

Coach Williamson has revealed that he is not willing to present the case which got hot at Ann Arbor last week. He will start three sophomores in the back field and will have Trevor Rees, another sophomore, at left end instead of the more seasoned Max Padlow.

The most striking change will be at quarter back. Instead of the famous Carl Cramer, Stand Pincus, a sophomore, will start. Buzz Wetzel, erstwhile regular back, who started against Michigan, will be under his blanket tomorrow when John Knebel, another sophomore, steps out to do the full backing.

Smith is a soph, but started in the Michigan game. Heekin, a junior, rounds out the quartet.
The Ohio State line will greatly outweigh the Evanston lads, but in the Michigan game some of the bulk boys had trouble taking their feet from one place to another.

The Last Chance

PITTSBURGH, N. D., Oct. 27.—Notre Dame's last chance to win the national championship is at hand today when the Fighting Irish take the field against the Maroons of the University of Minnesota at St. Paul. The game is the first of the season in which the Irish will be without their star player, Ed Heekin, who is recovering from a knee injury sustained in a game against Michigan last Saturday.

Referee—W. H. Friesel (Pittsburgh). Umpire—John Schommer (Chicago). Field Judge—Lee Daniels (Lafayette). Head Linesman—Dean Watkins (St. Paul). Radio broadcast—WGBM, Chicago, 1:35 p. m.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 27.—A Pitt Panther, whom you know as a lot of respect, has been given the job of leading the Notre Dame team tomorrow and there's a lot of apprehension hereabouts as to what may happen.

Notre Dame adherents are seeing Halloween pumpkin lanterns peering sulkily from behind every post and you can't blame 'em. There are those three games already played and in none of them have the Fighting Irish revealed the skill that characterized Notre Dame eleven of recent years. Then there's the 12 to 0 lathering slapped on the Irish by practically the same Pitt team last fall. And this cup of sorrow is filled to the brim by the fact that Pitt's 1933 edition is even superior, if not in regulars at least in the number of able reserves.

Blocking is the Answer.
Heard Anderson, the Notre Dame coach, has been trying all week to get consolation from the fact that Minnesota can be beaten. His scouts brought back reports that the Panther eleven, even though trimmed, appeared to be vastly superior to the Gophers. Possibly that was because the Panthers fumbled at critical times. On top of this Anderson doesn't know what his own offensive can do. It scored against Indiana, but not against Kansas, supposedly a warm up battle, or the Irish of Carnegie Tech.

The main trouble with Notre Dame's offense, as diagnosed by experts, is that the blocking is not effective. The blocking is there, but it is being done in the wrong place. The ball carriers are speedy, also inexperienced in certain cases, and they've been running away from their interference. They've discovered that going it alone isn't possible against even an ordinary enemy.

Krause Is Demoted.
There'll be no shock troops starting tomorrow after what happened last week against Carnegie, but there'll be some of the shockers in the role of regulars. Ed Krause and Tom Roach, both senior tackles, have lost their jobs for the time being to a couple of sophomores named Ken Stille and John McClure.

Tony Mazziotti finally is going to be started at quarter back, a job picked for him even before he became a sophomore. Injuries in practice early this fall have kept him out of the three games played to date. He still is slightly incapacitated, but Coach Anderson thinks the situation demands taking a chance.

Another indication of how much Pitt's coaches think of their charges, they may not even start Mike Sebastian, the left handed passing half back who caused such havoc last season. He's supposed to be slightly in doubt because of a tendency to fumble and his place may be occupied at the start by Dick Matesic, another senior. Sebastian is the lad who last fall against Notre Dame broke over the latter's right end and wormed his way along a 45-yard touchdown run in the final quarter.

"O, WAITER! HOLD THE PIE TILL DECEMBER"

Stanley Fay, captain and half back of the Michigan team (left), and Chuck Bernard, star center, snapped at dinner last night in the Windermere hotel, where Michigan is awaiting time for its Chicago showing against the Maroons on the Midway this afternoon. These young men are expert passers, passing everything from footballs to pie.

Spears Moans as Wisconsin Awaits Purdue

BY FRENCH LANE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Madison, Wis., Oct. 27.—A noisy University of Wisconsin homecoming crowd is making merry on the lower campus by the crystal waters of Lake Mendota tonight.

Bewhiskered grandpas, some of them former agile football heroes, and hundreds of other alumni are on the scene awaiting the climax of the celebration which comes tomorrow on Camp Randall field when the Badger football team battles Purdue.

The old grade, who grow a bit gray with each season, don't seem to be worried much despite the Badgers' two early season defeats, and further reports that a freshman team using Purdue plays has literally crushed the variety into a mass of pulp during this week's practice.

Girls Dangle Old Boys.
Even if there should be occasion for it, the homecomers haven't time to worry tonight. They are too busy reliving stirring homecomings of other years.

Then, too, they—particularly the grandpas—can't seem to keep their eyes off the football girls of 1933, who are most prominent in the crowd tonight. And who can blame them if momentarily they have forgotten about the football tussle with the Badgers from old Purdue tomorrow.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 27.—The national association of blues singing football coaches tonight was threatening to take drastic steps against Bernie Bierman of Minnesota and Oles Solomon of Iowa as their teams waited in the wings for the most critical contest of tomorrow's Western Conference schedule.

Although the game promises to be a battle to the death, with a crowd of nearly 45,000 in prospect, neither Mr. Bierman nor Mr. Solomon would sound a note of the association's theme song, "Here We are, Broken Legged." This failure to come through with the traditional program sob caused local agents of the organization to broadcast a bulletin to all members in good standing, and it now appears likely that both Bierman and Solomon will be ousted for their radical stand.

A Fine State of Affairs.
To complete their attitude of defiance, both Bierman and Solomon tonight stubbornly announced that they would send their very best lineups into tomorrow's struggle at Memorial stadium. Worse yet, Dave Woodward, the Minnesota trainer for the last ten years, substantiated Bierman with a statement that the present Gopher squad was in the finest shape he has ever seen them attain in his time.

Iowa had already indicated its healthy condition Thursday night before en-training for the game and have on the same in a brief drill upon arrival this afternoon.

The fact that both teams will send their ablest workmen into the game indicates a contest of heroic proportions. It means that Minnesota will present the same front as rose up last Saturday to smite Pitt's powerful Panthers. It also means that Iowa will send forth the same astounding team which is now leading the Big Ten with two victories and no defeats, and a record of having only one touchdown scored against it.

Crayne vs. Lund.
It also will bring together several young men who have been doing things in a large way for their respective alma maters. There will be Dick Crayne and Joe Laws, the Hawkeye back field dynamo, against Pug Lund and Julius Alfonso, who have been doing a double at the ball carrying chore for Minnesota. There will be Bernie Page, Iowa's all around end against Frank Larson, the Minnesota wingman of whom the natives hereabouts think so highly. There will be Zud Schammel, the reformed Iowa tackle now at guard, who will meet up with Bill Bevan, the Gopher star, who became eligible just in time for Big Ten duty. And there will be the two captains, Roy Oen of the Gophers, and Tom Moore of the Hawkeyes, both doing business at center.

All ticket holders are being urged to be on hand before the kickoff, since the experts suspect that the first quarter will provide the greatest amount of action. Both teams lend strength to this supposition by their performance thus far, each having gone to work early in every game played.

Added to this is the fact that Bierman and Solomon, one time teammates here under Dr. H. L. Williams, have the same motto, "Get them there touchdowns," each being a practicing apostle of offensive football.

Pessimism Reigns on Midway.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
Chicago's request for a crisp football day seems about to be fulfilled for today's game with Michigan at Stagg field. Back in favor with the weather man, all the Maroons now need to do is present Coach Clark Shaugnessy's football plays perfectly and fool some of Michigan's men part of the time. If all that is accomplished and victory follows, it would be an upset surpassing the one Iowa hung on Northwestern early in the season.

Chicago, however, does not anticipate a victory. If victory comes it will be all the more acceptable, and if it doesn't materialize, there will be no disappointment.

The Michigan eleven, on edge two weeks ago to face Cornell university and last week in the all important contest with Ohio State, undoubtedly will play below par. If a feeling of security drops the Wolverines' effectiveness far enough below their potentialities, Chicago may make the game something to talk about.

Always Room for Surprises.
It has happened to teams equally as strong as Michigan. Two years ago Wisconsin swept through Purdue in the first ten minutes and, before the demoralized Boilermakers got to earth, scored three touchdowns, enough to win, 21 to 14. Purdue, a far better team, trailed Chicago at the half, 6 to 0, the same season, finally winning, 14 to 6, by a belated attack. Chicago is just strong enough to take advantage of an over confident Michigan team.

Notwithstanding this pessimism, football is looking up on the Midway. The boys are heavier, possess more ability, and while the sophomores in this year's lineup have many things to learn they should master their lessons and eventually bring Chicago back to a point where football at Stagg field is competition and not an exhibition.

Twenty-five thousand are expected to see the game. Unless one of these will be Michigan's annual come to cheer for a victory which will advance their team one more step toward a fourth consecutive conference championship. The Michigan team arrived yesterday in time for a bit of exercise before settling in their quarters at the Hotel Windermere East. The Michigan band of 110 musicians will be here for duty before the game and between the halves.

Face Kicking Disadvantage.
Coach Shaugnessy has experimented with Chicago's sob this week. The squad also has had more contact work than usual, but no casualties resulted. The outstanding problem, in view of Michigan's reliance on a kicking attack to penetrate opponents' territory, is to find a punter who can get more distance in the duel today with John Reggel, Barton Smith, said to be the best punter on the squad, may get a chance in Chicago's back field to try to stop Reggel's gains through the air.

Substitutes for the Chicago line is a second major problem. The starting choices may do well for a half, but Michigan's annual come to cheer for a victory which will advance their team one more step toward a fourth consecutive conference championship. The Michigan team arrived yesterday in time for a bit of exercise before settling in their quarters at the Hotel Windermere East. The Michigan band of 110 musicians will be here for duty before the game and between the halves.

Passes to Consider.
Chicago probably will spend many more minutes on defense than offense, and unless the Maroons reach a field or thereabouts they will be concerned with kicking out of danger rather than with trick plays. If Chicago's line does a job of stopping smashes and runs, which Ohio State found too much of a task, then there's Bill Renner's forward passes to Willis Ward and Fred Petoskey to be considered.

Coach Harry Kipke of Michigan announced yesterday that Jack Heston, speedy half back, would not start today. Stan Fay, the captain, will replace Heston at right half and Louis Westover will fill in at quarter back for Fay.

A delegation of fans from Dubuque, Ia., the home town of Jay Berwang, will attend to see their favorite performer in Chicago's back field.

GAY CRUISER TAKES TOP 5 SEATTLE STAKE

Mary Gwyn Fiers Adds to List of Firsts.

Miss Mary Gwyn Fiers, whose gaited saddle beauties have proved one of the sensations at the World's Fair horse show in the 124th field artillery armory, added to her string of firsts last night when her four-year-old chestnut gelding, Gay Crusader, defeated an imposing list of competitors for the junior five-gaited stake championship. Second honors in this event went to the chestnut stallion, Beau Praline, of the Spindletop Stables, Beaumont, Tex., while the T. K. Simmons Farms of Bixby, Okla., was third with the gray mare, Fleeta Flash.

Californian Takes Two Firsts.

E. A. Stuart of Pomona, Cal., registered two firsts and his Rocket and Superlative taking the tandem harness pony class blue ribbon over his other pair, Carnation Rainbow and Better Times. The Stuart brothers repeated in the heavy harness horse event with High Society, a five-year-old bay mare.

The Chicago mounted police sextet was defeated by Cleveland for the fourth consecutive time in the inter-city competition.

In the international military jumps over a figure 8 course, the Irish Free State team took first, second, and fourth places. Capt. Cyril Hart, riding Limerick Lane, won the event.

RADIO KYW GETS PERMIT TO MOVE TO PHILADELPHIA

Relieves Overquota in Chicago Zone.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.] Washington, D. C., Oct. 27.—[Special.]—In a ruling which, in large measure, relieves Chicago of its biggest radio problem, the federal radio commission today granted the application of station KYW to move to Philadelphia.

This decision, by reducing the overquota status of Illinois by nearly one-half insofar as radio station facilities are concerned, means that all other stations in the state are less vulnerable to attacks from other states delinquent in facilities for their places in the radio spectrum.

Ending a hotly contested case, in which 16 stations were involved, the commission sustained the findings of its examiner and authorized the Westinghouse station, affiliated with the Chicago Herald-Examiner, to relocate in Philadelphia.

Competitive Applications Denied.

Competitive applications from stations in Detroit, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh for the KYW assignment—the 1200 kilocycle clear channel—were denied outright.

In radio circles it was pointed out that the decision likely will all but negative the applications of small stations in Wisconsin for the facilities of both W-G-N, operated by The Chicago Tribune and WMAQ, owned jointly by the National Broadcasting Company and the Chicago Daily News but operated by the former.

The Wisconsin applicants had relied mainly upon the greatly overquota status of Illinois in their applications. With this overquota status reduced from 10.75 quota units to 5.75, by virtue of KYW's removal, that point loses much of its effectiveness.

A quota unit, under the commission's arbitrary yardstick based on the law, is the equivalent of a regional station operating full time and using 1,000 watts power. A full time clear channel station, like KYW, represents five units. Thus, with the removal of KYW from Chicago, the overquota status of the state is reduced by five units.

Will Continue for Several Months.

For the time being KYW is authorized under the commission's ruling to continue operation in Chicago pending construction of the new station in Philadelphia. This will require six months or even longer. It is possible, also, that one or more of the rejected applicants will protest the decision by appeal to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia. In that event the actual removal may be further delayed.

The KYW case has been pending before the commission since July, 1932, when hearings originally were held before Examiner E. W. Pratt, who since has retired from government service. In all, 16 stations and 23 applications for facilities were involved. Each of Mr. Pratt's recommendations were sustained by the commission, which voted 4 to 0 for the KYW removal, with Commissioner Hanley, representing the fourth or middle western zone, not participating, since he was not a member of the commission at the inception of the case.

Channel Assigned to East.

The controversy grows out of the fact that the 1200 kilocycle clear channel originally was assigned to the second, or east central zone, in which Philadelphia is located, as one of its eight clear channels. In 1928, when this allocation was made, however, the channel was "loaned" to the fourth zone and assigned to KYW as a "borrowed channel." By voluntarily offering to move from the fourth to the second zone KYW sought to help the commission settle this controversy.

COL. R. R. McCORMICK SPEAKS ON FREEDOM OF PRESS TONIGHT

Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of The Chicago Tribune, will speak on "Freedom of the Press" tonight from 9 to 9:30 p. m. [Chicago time] and his speech will be broadcast by W-G-N. Col. McCormick will speak in the studios of the National Broadcasting Company in New York City and the speech will be carried to W-G-N over NBC lines.

Col. McCormick is in Eastchester, N. Y., for the celebration and editors of the liberation of John Peter Zenger, after he had been charged with publishing false and seditious libels in his paper 200 years ago. Zenger was the first American newspaperman to fight for freedom of the press. After the celebration at Eastchester today, Col. McCormick will go to the NBC studios in New York to deliver his talk, which will be broadcast over a nation-wide network with W-G-N the only Chicago outlet.

since the second zone is under quota and Pennsylvania is the most under quota in the country.

In the same decision the commission denied the applications of stations WQOW, Fort Wayne, and WVAW, Wheeling, W. Va., for full time operation on the 1160 kilocycle clear channel, which they now share. This channel is a second zone wave, under the 1928 allocation, but WQOW, in the fourth zone, was allowed to operate one-half time on it in partial compensation for the loan of the 1020 wave to KYW.

Other Applications Denied.

The commission, simultaneously, denied the applications of stations WXYZ, Detroit; WJAS, Pittsburgh, and of WFAW, WIP, and WCAU, Philadelphia, for the KYW facilities. It granted the applications of three small stations in the Philadelphia area for changes in wave lengths to avoid interference with KYW when it relocates in Philadelphia. Other stations drawn into the controversy retain their present status.

In its formal decision the commission made a statement which is expected to have an important bearing on its future decisions involving applications for facilities.

"Although there exists in a licensee no property or priority rights in a frequency," it stated, "it has been held that a licensee with a good past record and substantial investment in his station should not be deprived of his license, except for compelling reasons."

NEW TAXES CUT INTO PROFIT OF ILLINOIS UTILITY*Business Gain Fails to Lift Net.

Although handling a larger volume of business, the net earnings of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois in the September quarter fell far short of the profit in the same period of 1932, according to the quarterly report issued last night.

James Simpson, chairman, told the stockholders that the decline in net income while the gross revenue was expanding was due to additional taxes and other burdens placed on the company.

Gross operating revenues were $3,082,482 for the three months, as compared with $3,068,248 for the corresponding 1932 period.

Sales Rise with Industrial Gain.

The expansion in the gross business, Mr. Simpson said, was the result of the increased industrial activity in the territory served by the company. This activity led to improved electrical sales to the large industrial customers.

Net income was $271,400 for the quarter, equivalent, after preferred dividends, to 2 cents a share on the common stock. The company earned net of $66,323, or 67 cents a share, on the smaller gross business in the third quarter last year.

"Sales of electricity have shown an encouraging improvement," Mr. Simpson said. "A large part of the sales are due to the increased use of electricity for refrigeration. This improvement in sales, while reflected in the earnings, has been more than offset by additional taxes and other burdens imposed on the company."

Explained Lower Net to State.

Mr. Simpson said that he had made a detailed report on the reasons for the declining net income in his address before the Illinois Commerce Commission in which he urged a reduction of the inquiry into utility rates.

The company's report for the nine months ended Sept. 30 makes a more favorable comparison with a year ago than did the statement for the first six months of 1932.

Gross operating revenues for the nine months, totaling $24,416,456, ran 5.8 per cent below the year ago figures.

At the first six months gross ran 5.5 per cent below 1932.

Nine Months' Comparison.

Net income for the first nine months was $1,580,525, or $1.43 a share on the common stock after provision for the preferred shares. This contrasts with net of $3,366,566, or $4.28 a share, on common for the first nine months of 1932.

The experience of the company shows that the third quarter normally produces the lowest net earnings of any quarter in the year. Mr. Simpson explained, "while the first and fourth quarters produce the highest. The earnings for the first quarter this year were $1,116 a share, in view of the fact that the board of directors felt justified in declaring the present dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock."

Sales for Heating Increase.

The campaign of the company to increase sales of gas for space heating and water heating has been successful, he added. Residential and commercial space heating customers increased 3,822 between July 29 and Oct. 21.

Comparative figures for the third quarters of 1933 and 1932 follow:

	1933.	1932.
Gross op. revs.	$3,082,482	$2,968,248

1933 EARNINGS
OF BORG-WARNER
SHOW INCREASE

Net earnings of the Borg-Warner corporation amounted to $650,931, or 51 cents a share, in the September quarter, C. S. Davis, president, reported yesterday. This compared with net earnings of $717,154, or 57 cents a share, in the preceding three months and a loss of $109,612 in the third quarter of 1932.

Net earnings were $956,102 for the nine months ended Sept. 30, compared with a deficit of $22,508 for the comparable period last year. After dividends on the preferred stock of the constituent and parent companies there was a balance of $86,758, equivalent to 70 cents a share on the 1,150,904 shares of common stock.

The company had current assets of $12,711,549 on Sept. 30, including cash of $4,472,419, and United States government securities of $3,349,120. Other marketable securities amounted to $234,387. Current liabilities amounted to $2,269,919.

Retail Selling Leads Gain in Week's Trade

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.] New York, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Despite the temporary setbacks at various short periods during the month, October has marked a new record in many sections of the country for business revival, say Dun & Bradstreet.

"The reports received this week brought a rising tide of statistical evidence to attest at least some headway, as renewed activities of a constructive nature have marked the beginning of a resumption of the recovery program and seem destined to carry it to triumphantly heights, with the accompaniment of stronger industrial organization, closer commercial cooperation and the stabilizing influence of governmental participation."

Confidence Regarded as Urgent Need.

"Those who manufacture or sell merchandise consider the latest moves of the Federal Reserve bank, the long-awaited motivation needed to accelerate the forward movement, which reached its peak in August, even though their view may not be shared so generally by the banking and money lending fraternity. The most urgent need of the moment apparently is for the restoration of confidence, which was weakened by the inability of the encouraging gains attained in a few months to reach the same genuine objectives which had been outlined."

"While general business conditions were reported as somewhat brighter this week in nearly all districts, with many workers receiving their first pay in more than a month, because of the interruption of strikes, the most vigorous upturn occurred in retail distribution."

Weather Aids Retail Trade.

"Retail trade responded to the first touch of wintry weather, which gave a sudden spur to the movement of seasonal merchandise, although department store sales depended heavily on profit sharing sales to move stocks."

"A further incentive to buying was provided by the continuous emphasis placed by store advertising on the imminent closing of the season. Textile lines are the most active, with women's wear, including coats and suits, selling better than last week."

"Wholesale orders have fallen below the total for the corresponding week last year, even though the volume of merchandise moved was larger because of shipments on old contracts."

BANK CLEARINGS SHOW GAIN OVER
EARLIER WEEKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.] New York, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Bank clearings are again quiet, but not as quiet as the earlier weeks of the month, says Dun & Bradstreet. "The total this week for all leading cities in the United States of $1,474,329,000 was 10.4 per cent above that for the same week of last year."

The aggregate for centers outside of New York at $1,416,218,000 was 8.7 per cent higher.

Seventeen of the twenty cities, outside of New York show larger clearings this week, with notable gains at some western and southern points. Included in the latter are Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Atlanta, St. Paul, Portland, and Seattle. A substantial increase also appears at Philadelphia and Pittsburgh this week.

The total for the week exceeds that of the preceding week by $264,519,000, whereas there was an unusual recession for the same two weeks of last year, amounting to $739,340,000.

JACKSON-BOESSEL
IN MIDDLE WEST

Jackson Bros., Boessel & Co., New York and Chicago stock and grain brokers, yesterday announced the sale of five offices in the middle west.

The Chicago office of the firm will be continued another month with the business eventually being transferred to Winthrop, Mitchell.

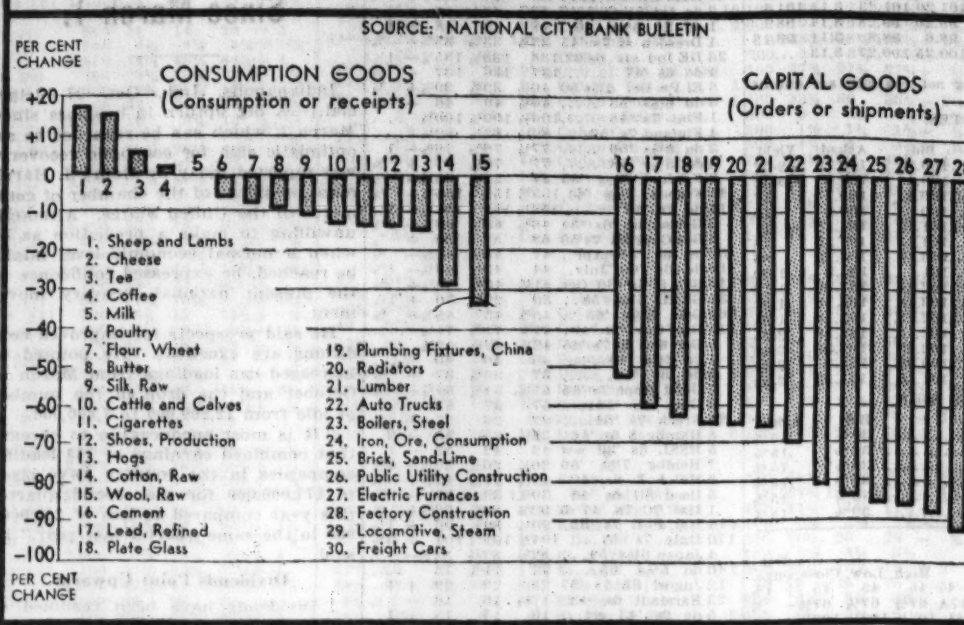

The other offices affected by the sale are those in Milwaukee, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Mo., and St. Paul, Minn. The network of correspondent connections is also involved in the transactions. The New York office will be continued under a new partnership, which will include some of the present partners.

Jackson Bros., Boessel & Co., a subsidiary of the old Chicago grain firm of Jackson Brothers and the New York stock house of Jackson & Boessel, formed several years ago. The Jackson family interests were the same in both firms.

The Chicago office of the firm will be continued another month with the business eventually being transferred to Winthrop, Mitchell.

Electric Appliance Sales of Westinghouse Higher

Electric appliance sales of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company were up 18 per cent in September over a year ago, and October sales so far are the best in the company's history. J. C. Schmidbauer, northwest district manager, reported yesterday.

Today the Delaware and Hudson, New York, New Haven and Hartford, and Detroit and Toledo Shore Line, agreed to act as "bridge lines" to provide connections for the door-services between the lines of these companies.

This bridge line action did not affect the vote to oppose the Pennsylvania Railroad. The vote to oppose the Pennsylvania Railroad was controlled by the Van Sweringen.

Divided Opinion Expected.

LIMIT ON PRODUCTION WRONG, BANK EXPERT TELLS CASKET MAKERS

Overproduction, which has been blamed for most of the depression woes and the tyranny of the machine, is a fallacy and does not exist, H. Parker Willis, professor of banking at Columbia university, declared yesterday in addressing delegates to a conference of the Casket Manufacturers of America at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

"The overproduction complained about is nothing more than a bad distribution of production," he said. "One has only to point to the unemployed millions in our country as to the starving hordes in Asiatic countries to prove that there is no general overproduction."

"We err when we seek to limit production. The important issues are the proper distribution of products to consumers and the ultimate reduction of selling values."

Another speaker, Ray Vance of the Vance-Langerquist associations of New York, pointed out weaknesses in the NRA, though crediting the program with success as an emergency measure. He declared that a conservative capital will not cooperate in the "buy now" campaign because it fears hostile control later.

PLEDGE SUPPORT IN CORN-HOG PLAN

Washington, D. C., Oct. 27.—(AP)—A spokesman for the meat packing industry today pledged its cooperation with the FAA in carrying out the latter's $500,000,000 corn-hog production control program.

The pledge came in response to a declaration yesterday by Secretary Wallace that he was prepared for "something of a showdown" with the industry in the event hog prices drop 50 cents per hundredweight when the hog marketing tax goes into effect about Nov. 5. The rate will be 50 cents, moving up to a $2 maximum on Feb. 1.

William Whitfield Woods, president of the Institute of American Meat Packers, Chicago, sent the message. He said:

"Although because of the perishable nature of its products this industry was not able to endorse the plan, it submits that nevertheless its cooperation in plans sponsored by the department in the last few months is adequate evidence of its desire to cooperate with the government wherever it is consistently possible."

Yesterday Wallace said that it has been reported to him that the plan is popular to the corn-hog program was developing through fear of the effects of the tax on hog prices.

His aide said that he is prepared to invoke his power to license the industry, virtually assuming control of the marketing and processing of hogs, if necessary, to carry out his plan.

Report Tire Price Fight Settled by NRA Efforts

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.] New York, Oct. 27.—The tire price war which has been in progress since last Friday is understood to have been brought to an end through the intervention of the NRA. Tires for a few days were being offered to dealers and national accounts at approximately 50 per cent discount, although most of the business was in truck tires.

Fears Abuse of Inflation.

These policies, he declared, had been inflationary, but he went on to discriminate between the various kinds of inflation. Depreciating the tendency in some quarters to denounce "inflation" without inquiring what kind of inflation is concerned, he remarked that the real trouble about inflationary policies is that they can be so readily abused by politicians.

"A politician with a printing press is very dangerous," he said, "and that is, I think, the ultimate reason why people would be well advised to be very careful of what kind of inflation they might adopt."

Connections Offered.

Today the Delaware and Hudson, New York, New Haven and Hartford, and Detroit and Toledo Shore Line, agreed to act as "bridge lines" to provide connections for the door-services between the lines of these companies.

This bridge line action did not affect the vote to oppose the Pennsylvania Railroad. The vote to oppose the Pennsylvania Railroad was controlled by the Van Sweringen.

Divided Opinion Expected.

This division of opinion had been forecast by the Van Sweringen.

British Finance Leader Hints of Reprisals

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.] New York, Oct. 27.—If the new monetary policy of the United States is seriously altering the relationship between sterling and the dollar, Great Britain will be compelled to take defensive measures, Sir Robert Horne, former chancellor of the exchequer, declared today in an address before the Bond Club of New York.

Weighing his words with evident concern, Sir Robert expressed the opinion that the purchase of new American gold by the RFC would have little effect upon the sterling-dollar rate. But, he said, if the second part of the policy announced Sunday was adopted—namely, that of purchasing gold in the foreign market—other currencies, and particularly sterling, would undoubtedly be influenced in a marked degree.

"If it went far," he said, "it would be necessary for us, from the trading point of view, if we are to carry on an external business, to do something, also."

Denies Thought of Retaliation.

"Believe me, it would not be done in any respect in the shape of retaliation. You must not think that. But we have got to defend our trading position, and we cannot let it get into a state of unreality. The ratio between sterling and the dollar must be watched and must not be permitted to get out of due proportion."

"I only say that hoping very much that the action will never come to be taken which would involve anything like a competition in depreciation between our two currencies. That, in my view, would be one of the worst things that could happen to either of us, and one of the worst things that could happen to the trade of the world."

As an alternative to this possibility of competitive depreciation of currencies between the two nations, Sir Robert expressed the hope that by some understanding the ratio of sterling to the dollar could be kept within limits by concerted action of Great Britain and the United States.

Says World Waits On U. S.

Sir Robert began by declaring that the fate of America was of vital importance to all the rest of the world. In a measure, he said, the United States has the responsibility of carrying upon its shoulders the fortunes of the world. Therefore, he remarked, there cannot be any reasoning man who does not today profoundly desire that this country should have success in all its policies.

Describing the efforts made here and in Great Britain to combat the deflation, Sir Robert declared that the two countries had been traveling along parallel lines up to the time that the NRA was put into operation. He said the objective of both countries, he said, had been to raise prices. The methods employed in both cases had been open market operations, the buying of government securities by the central banks. Both countries had paid "some lip service, at least, to the plan of government expenditure upon public works."

Fears Abuse of Inflation.

These policies, he declared, had been inflationary, but he went on to discriminate between the various kinds of inflation. Depreciating the tendency in some quarters to denounce "inflation" without inquiring what kind of inflation is concerned, he remarked that the real trouble about inflationary policies is that they can be so readily abused by politicians.

"A politician with a printing press is very dangerous," he said, "and that is, I think, the ultimate reason why people would be well advised to be very careful of what kind of inflation they might adopt."

BLACK, RESERVE
HEAD, TALKS TO BANKERS HERE*Visit Follows Decline in U. S. Bond Buying.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

La Salle street visited considerable interest in the visit to Chicago yesterday of Gov. Eugene B. Black of the Federal Reserve Board. His visit coincided with the monthly meeting of the directors of the Chicago reserve bank, which was held yesterday.

Observers believed that Gov. Black's visit had some connection with the part the Chicago reserve bank has been playing in the credit expansion program which the Roosevelt administration is carrying out through the reserve system.

Black officials here said that Gov. Black attended the directors' meeting and later in the day visited a Century of Progress with his wife. He will return to the capital this morning.

(A. P. Photo.)

"Just Talking It Over."

"We were just talking things over," an official declared. In banking quarters Gov. Black's visit was seen as a move to bring about closer coordination between the reserve banks in carrying out the credit expansion program.

It was regarded as significant that in the last two weeks the Chicago reserve bank has eased up in its purchase of government bonds. For the first several weeks of the government's drive to expand credit by government bond purchases, it was the Chicago reserve bank that carried most of the load. Until three weeks ago the Chicago bank was buying 18 millions a week, or approximately one-third of the amount being purchased by all twelve banks. Two weeks ago the Chicago bank stopped buying and last week bought only 8 millions. The total purchases of the system also fell from the usual 35 millions to 25 millions.

Another Chicago Challenge.

There has been talk that the reserve banks were balking at further loading up of governments. Technically the reserve banks are owned by the member banks in the district, and as such are private institutions. Actually, however, the banks are part of a coordinated semi-public system whose policies are shaped by the reserve board in Washington. In years gone by the Chicago reserve bank directors have challenged the wisdom of some of the policies dictated by Washington.

It is regarded as significant that Gov. Black should come to Chicago at this time when rumors of dissension are heard.

STEWART-WARNER SHOWING BEST IN SEVERAL YEARS

The Stewart-Warner corporation practically broke even for the three months ended Sept. 30, thereby making the best showing in several years. Results for the third quarter, as announced last night by Joseph E. Otis Jr., executive vice president, were a net loss of only $14,064, after all charges, including patent and development expense and depreciation.

Previously such charges had been made against surplus, but earnings for this year have been adjusted to the new accounting methods. On the new basis the net loss for the third quarter of 1932 was $660,161, for the first quarter of this year $775,095, and for the second quarter $268,824. For the nine months ended Sept. 30 the net loss was $1,057,833, compared with loss of $1,654,094 for the corresponding period in 1932, figured on a comparable basis.

The directors at their meeting yesterday created the office of controller and elected E. H. Farrell to the position. He has been in charge of factory accounting.

HEAVY RESERVES
LOWER GILLETTE
RAZOR EARNINGS

New York, Oct. 27.—(AP)—The Gillette Safety Razor company reports for the Sept. 30 quarter net profit of $453,278, after all charges, including a reserve of $1,050,000 for price adjustments. The profit was equivalent, after preferred stock dividends, to 3 cents a common share. This compares with $1,275,045, or 44 cents a share, in the preceding quarter and $1,371,277, or 48 cents a share, in the September quarter last year.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30 net profit was $2,886,104, equivalent to 76 cents a share on the common stock, compared with $4,655,062, or $1.73 a share, in the first nine months of 1932.

STOCKS SPUR;
TRADERS STAGE
INFLATION BOOMWave of Buying Follows
Advance in Wheat.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 27.—Stock traders took a fresh hit today on their optimism with the sharp advance in wheat prices today. Buying orders were poured in for the issues of farm implement, liquor, and other corporations in line to profit from inflation in sufficient volume to shake the market out of its rut and convert early losses into gains running anywhere from fractions to more than two points.

Activity, which had subsided almost to the vanishing point at times during the earlier hours of the session, picked up again during the last few minutes. The total turnover, however, amounted to only 1,139,140 shares, which was considerably less than even that of yesterday. Brokers reported a widespread disposition to adhere to the sidelines and await further indications of the effect of the administration's new monetary policy.

Professional Buying Is Seen.

The overnight news was devoid of anything in the way of stimulus and up to around the final hour of trading the market had merely sloshed around with a tendency to seek easier levels. Indications were that the belated buying spurt was pretty much of a professional affair.

But whatever its motive power, the advance in prices put the market to bed in a constructive mood and added one more session to the account of the bulls, who had begun to lose heart when the President's announcement with its promise of new activity in the recovery program came along to their aid last Sunday night.

The new advanced price on gold fixed by the government apparently had little effect on speculative sentiment one way or the other.

Liquor Issues Forge Ahead.

Of the different groups ahead in the windup rally, the repeat stocks had a share of the best of it. National Distillers, in particular, was well liked and forged ahead for nearly five points. Less impressive gains were scored by American Commercial Alcohol, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Commercial Solvents, and others.

In the farm stock division, J. I. Case capitalized the wheat rally for a net gain of more than 2 points and Montgomery Ward bettered its rating to the extent of a point on fairly brisk trading.

Some of the metal stocks spurred rather impressively, among them being U. S. Smelting and American Smelting. The gold stocks were not so pert as they had been in other recent rallies, however. Homestake, in fact, countered the trend with a 3 point loss, and Alaska-Juneau did little more than hold its own.

Pivotal Issues Advance.

Aside from Chrysler and General Motors, the automotive group attracted little attention. United States Steel and General Electric found bidders at the industrial counter. Westinghouse gained about a point.

The utilities ruled irregular most of the day, but some of the day's action was in the utilities. American Telephone was the leader, with International Telephone as runner-up. New York Central made a display for a while in the rail group, running up about 2 points, but then slowed down before the closing session.

Various specialties including Cables, United Aircraft, and Allied Chemical were liked.

Wide swings occurred in some of the preferred shares of General Electric, General Electric, and Keith Albee, which dropped 5 to 8 points, and American Ice and Gulf States Steel, which rose 5 points or more.

ZUKOR TESTIFIES TO BONUSES PAID BY PARAMOUNT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 27.—Adolph Zukor, president of the bankrupt Paramount Pictures corporation, testified today before Federal Judge Henry C. Davis, that he received cash bonuses totaling $750,000 and approximately 10,000 shares of stock.

Questioned by Samuel I. Rosen, counsel for the corporation's trustee in bankruptcy, Mr. Zukor described his career in the amusement business, which began as a penny arcade operator in 1904. Then he outlined the financial history of Paramount Pictures to cover the world.

He described the progressive increase in its capitalization from 1909, when it was privately owned, with about 50 stockholders. Most of the financial financing, he said, was undertaken by Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

In 1931, he said, "when the corporation's financial outlook became acute," Kuhn, Loeb & Co. recommended that John D. Hertz, Chicago banker and textile executive, be placed in charge of the financial committee. Various Paramount officials resigned within a few months, he added.

Hertz is to be called as a witness.

SILVER PRICES

Advancing prices for gold had their counterpart in silver, with prices for the metal rising 1/2 to 3/4 cent per ounce higher, with sales of 3,000,000 ounces. October closed at 32.30 cents; December, 32.50 cents; March, 32.60 cents; May, 32.70 cents; July, 32.80 cents; and September, 32.90 cents.
